Raging fires sear 5 states

BOISE (UPI) — Overnight lightning strikes started more than 90 new fires in the northwest, the Boise Interagency Fire Center said today, including about 20 on Washington's Wenatchee National Forest.

The center said the strikes meant firefighters were battling wildfires on more than 90,000 acres in California, Washington, Oregon and Colorado. More lightning was expected in the Northwest.

In Alaska, the acreage burning under dense smoke cover was estimated at more than one million.

Wally Shiverdecker, information officer at the center, said crews were concentrating on the 2,400-acre Lost Fire 18 miles southeast of Bly, Ore., which was burning rapidly east along steep slopes.

In California, more than 400 fires were burning. Shiverdecker said more than 2,000 men backed by aerial tankers, helicopters and bulldozers were on the lines at the 34,000-acre Marble Cone fire in the Los Padres National Forest.

He said part of the fire was burning through the Ventana Wilderness Area, where firefighters were using hand tools and power saws to battle the flames. Two wilderness cabins were reported destroyed.

The center has sent about 100 20-man crews to California, Shiverdecker said.

The center has set up a special coordinating team — called the Multi-Agency Coordinating Group — to allocate available equipment and personnel to the various fires, Shiverdecker said.

The MAC staff is composed of fire management and logistics experts from cooperating federal agencies. The team determines where to concentrate its resources with priority for fires threatening life, property and unusual natural resources.

Two huge fires merged in the scenic Big Sur wilderness of central California and blackened 48,000 acres of brush and timber, the worst of over 400 fires caused by freak lightning storms in the state.

National Guard units were activated to help supply trucks, planes and manpower at the site of the larger fire, burning in the Ventana Wilderness area of the Los Padres National Forest.

"The fire is out of control and real hot," said Kathy Ross, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Forest Service. She said a fire that burned 18,000 acres one one side of the picturesque resort and 12,000 acres on the other side had merged and spread.

Lightning storms started scores of fires which by Thursday night had burned 80,000 to 90,000 acres of brush and timberland in northern and central California. Firefighting units were pushed to the limit, and and the Forest Service said they were "running out of people" to help fight the fires. Crews were being brought in to help fight the fires from neighboring states.

More than 100 other wildfires, most of them also lightning caused, were reported burning in Oregon, Washington, Alaska and Colorado.

In California's Monterey County, all national forest land was closed to the public Thursday because of the fire danger.

Teens smack lips over 'Kiss'

By LARRY SWISHER

MAGIC VALLEY—Are they just a freaky bunch of guys, the hottest thing since the Beatles, or a sick sign of the times?

Whatever they turn out to be, the rock group Kiss has captured the imagination of teen-age America. Last week in a Gallup poll teenagers named Kiss their favorite music group, shoving the Eagles and the Beatles aside.

Their concerts are sellouts and four of their albums are among the best-selling in the country, including one in the top five.

Kiss is the current "phenomenon" in the music world.

The group, whose trademark is painted faces and a violent stage act, is the top seller in Magic Valley as well.

The Gallup poll says, "Kiss is the runaway favorite and rock totally dominates the teenage scene." Those interviewed called the group unique and said, "they do what they want on stage."

That they do.

Gene Simmons is the mean one, an evil magician in dragon boots, who spits blood and becomes a human flame-thrower during every concert. He also thrills crowds by sticking out his congenitally long, pointed tongue.

Paul Stanley dresses as a slinky glamour boy. Over one eye is painted a five-pointed star, like the stars and bullets Kiss's records get on the charts, and his rouged lips pucker in a constant pout.

Ace Freuley appears like a visitor from outer space, wearing moon boots and Flash Gordon movie costume, while the fourth member of the group, Peter Chris, turns into a catlike being for the fans.

The group seems to feed on an image of evil, sex, violence and fantasy. Take away the image and the theatrics and the group's music doesn't amount to much, some in the business say.

A four publicity manager for Kiss's record company says, "They're not sugar and spice, that's for sure."

"The fact that Kiss is a runaway is a real phenomenon." Their stage act is just phenomenal. How do you explain a phenomenon?"

Post-recession low for jobless ranks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployment again dipped to 6.9 per cent in July, returning to its lowest level since the nation began to recover from the recent recession, the Labor Department reported today.

But employment failed to increase for the first time in nine months and the total number of available workers actualy declined in July. Officials dismissed these developments as the result of a "quirk."

Unemployment essentially has been hovering around 7 per cent for the past four months. As a result of the 0.2 per cent decline in July, joblessness returned to a post-recession low established in May.

Prior to May, the jobless rate had not been as low as 6.9 per cent since November, 1974, when the recession was just beginning to heat up. Unemployment peaked at 9 per cent in 1975 and 8 per cent in 1976.

President Carter's economic advisers anticipate only a small improvement in unemployment during 1977, possibly falling no lower than 6.5 per cent by the end of the year.

July's 220,000 decline in the number of unemployed Americans occurred almost exclusively among teenagers and adult women. The jobless rate among teenagers fell to 17.4 per cent, the lowest point since the early recession days of October, 1974.

Total employment held virtually steady at 90.6 million persons in July, ending a steady, eight-month increase that has taken it to record high levels. Some 255,000 were nonetheless added in the nonfarm sector, most of them in service industries.

The civilian labor force — the total number of Americans employed or looking for work — declined by 340,000 to 97.3 million in July. This reversed a steady 12-month trend of increases, including an unusually large jump in June.

Labor Department officials explained that the June-July fluctuations in the labor force and total employment were exaggerated by the survey schedule.

The labor force normally reaches an annual peak somewhere during a four week period spanning June and July, as millions of students and graduates are looking for work.

Officials said that peak normally shows up in the July survey, but because the June survey was taken unusually late it showed up a month earlier. One official said the pattern should be interpreted as an insignificant survey "quirk."

The unemployment rate for adult men held steady at 5.1 per cent in July. Joblessness was down to 6.9 per cent for women and unchanged at 13.2 per cent for blacks.

Nearly three-fourths of the new jobs in July were created in the service industries, where part-time teenagers normally work. Factory jobs rose by 70,000, and construction employment rose 35,000, partly because of several strike settlements.

Mining employment declined 35,000 as a result of wildcat strikes in the United Mine Workers union.

Times-News case moved to Aug. 26

TWIN FALLS — A $36 million libel suit against the Times-News and a precedent-setting ruling on when reporters must reveal sources could all be decided Aug. 26 in Idaho Fifth District Court.

Shortly after 11 a.m. today, Judge Theron Ward set Aug. 26 as the day he will decide what sanctions, if any, to impose on two former Times-News journalists for refusing to reveal the name of confidential tipsters whom they talked to in connection with stories about Sierra Life Insurance Co. of Twin Falls.

Sierra Life filed a multi-million dollar libel suit against the Times-News in late 1975 in connection with stories written by reporter Bill Lazarus and edited by Richard High, former managing editor of the newspaper.

Also on Aug. 26, Judge Ward said he would rule on the newspaper's request to have the entire libel case dropped.

Originally, the judge had said he would decide today what sanctions to impose on High and Lazarus for not revealing the names of tipsters who had talked to the men about Sierra Life.

The newspapermen claimed since the confidential sources gave no information which was printed in the newspaper stories on Sierra Life there was no reason to turn the names of these sources over to Sierra's attorneys.

On Thursday, Times-News lawyers requested a summary judgment in the libel case based on signed affidavits from quoted sources in the Sierra stories who said the articles were "true and accurate."

Then in court today, Times-News attorneys argued Judge Ward should delay imposition of sanctions against High and Lazarus until Sierra Life answered a series of questions which the newspaper posed to them over a month ago.

In June, the newspaper asked Sierra to provide the names of policyholders who had cancelled their Sierra insurance policies as a result of Times-News articles and to provide the names and testimony of witnesses who eventually may try to show Times-News articles on Sierra were damaging to the Twin Falls company.

Newspaper attorney William McCurdy argued the information should be in possession of the court before Judge Ward imposed sanctions on High and Lazarus.

Over the objections of Sierra Life attorney Joseph Imhoff, Judge Ward decided to delay any sanctions against High and Lazarus until the questions or interrogatories requested by the Times-News were answered.

"I hesitate to impose any sanctions if there is still something that has bearing on these sanctions which should be heard by the court," Judge Ward said.

After the hearing, Times-News attorney Lloyd Webb said postponement of the sources decision and the hearing of the summary judgment argument "came together beautifully."

Sierra Life's attorney Imhoff had no comment on today's postponement.

Canadian politico asks price tag on gas line

OTTAWA, Canada (UPI) — Canada needs Arctic gas, but the proposed Alaska Highway pipeline to move natural gas south may never be used to carry Canadian gas, says opposition Conservative leader Joe Clark.

During the first of two days of debate Thursday on possible construction of a northern pipeline, Clark said his party gave qualified support to the proposed Alcan route but was worried it would move only U.S. Alaskan gas.

"Our primary goal is to deliver Canadian resources to Canadian markets," he said. "We should put a price on access to our territory."

Clark said moving Alaskan gas was a secondary consideration, and added, "Canada should not be expected to underwrite what is initially and may be forever a purely American project."

The Alcan route would require a second pipeline to carry Canadian gas from the Mackenzie River delta to the main route. The feasibility of this extra pipeline, the only way Canadian gas could be carried south, has not been studied.

Government House leader Allan McEachen said in his opening speech the government intended to introduce legislation to establish an agency to control all aspects of any pipeline approved.

He said the agency would cooperate with other levels of government and was needed to "minimize duplication and confusion."

The two-day debate will put the opinions of Parliamentarians on the record but the final decision on whether or not to allow construction of a pipeline rests with the cabinet. The cabinet decision is expected next week.

A final decision on construction must be made before September if President Jimmy Carter is to have the information before his own deadline for deciding a way of moving Alaskan gas south.

The New Democratic Party has questioned the value to Canada of any northern gas pipeline.

Reworked farm bill should get Carter OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will accept compromise legislation subsidizing farmers and the food budget of the poor, congressional leaders said today.

The chairmen of the House and Senate Agriculture Committees, Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., forecast Carter's approval of the $11 billion bill in separate interviews.

Foley said he had no direct word from Carter but added, "I'm not concerned."

A Senate-House conference committee has been negotiating differences between House and Senate farm-food bills since Monday. It was expected to complete work today with approval of minor food stamp amendments and a lengthy section authorizing expanded agricultural research.

In addition to a sharp increase in 1977 grain supports and smaller increases from 1978 through 1981, the bill also carries extended support plans for crops including rice, cotton, wool, peanuts and milk and a new two-year support program to raise sugar prices.

Urban lawmakers, who helped farm leaders win adoption of the support levels, got a four-year extension and sweeping overhaul of the $5.6 billion food stamp program.

The measure included adoption of President Carter's plan to let needy people get free stamps without first buying additional stamps for cash.

In a Thursday meeting conferees adopted amendments including the compromise sugar support plan which critics said could raise consumer costs up to $660 million or more.

Backers claimed it was needed to keep farmers in business and asserted that soft drink bottlers and food processors had wide enough margins to absorb sugar hikes without passing them on to consumers.

The food stamp portion of the bill, in addition to Carter's free stamp program, tightens income eligibility ceilings, and stiffens anti-fraud measures and job search requirements for participants.

An estimated 3 million people who now can't afford to buy stamps would enter the program with elimination of the stamp purchase requirement, experts said. But other portions of the new legislation would drop nearly 1.5 million of the current 16.7 million recipients and cut benefits for up to 4.4 million others.

In Thursday action, conferees approved a "cap" on food stamp spending — starting at $5.8 billion in 1978 and rising to $6.3 billion by 1981. They also agreed to let the program continue for four years — linking it to the term of the farm law extension.

Vance, Hussein confer

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance arrived in Jordan from Damascus today, determined to continue his search for the framework of a Middle East peace conference despite a setback in Syria.

As he arrived for his talks with King Hussein, Vance said: "We are determined to continue the search for a consensus for a Geneva conference. Middle East peace remains at the top of our list of foreign policy priorities."

Thursday night, Vance's hope for a preliminary meeting of "confrontation state" foreign ministers was dealt a major, and possibly fatal, blow by President Hafez Assad of Syria, who said he saw no benefit in the idea and certain risks in it.

The joint American-Egyptian plan called for a "working group" of foreign ministers to meet in the United States next month in a prelude to a fullscale Geneva peace conference. Assad said the plan ignored Palestinian representation in the peace talks.

However in Damascus, after Vance had left, Arab diplomatic sources said Assad's rejection was not "an outright or final rejection, but rather a conditional one." They said he indicated he would go along with the "working group" idea if Israel agreed to have the Palestine Liberational Organization represented at the projected Geneva conference.

The future of the West Bank, occupied by Israel since the 1967 war, will be the focus of Vance's talks with the King of Jordan, Vance said, however, that the talks will include the whole list of Middle East questions.

Under one proposal, the West Bank would become a Palestinian "mini-state" linked with Jordan. Israel, however, has insisted the area is "liberated" Israeli territory, belonging to the Jewish state by historic biblical right.

As he left Syria for Amman, Vance told reporters he did "not rule out the possibility" of a very brief return visit to Damascus. He described his talks with Assad as "friendly and useful".

Officers will join county plan

TWIN FALLS — County law enforcement officers who favored a state retirement program for Twin Falls County employes but lost their cause in an election Tuesday, say they have little alternative now but to join the county's individual plan.

Deputy Sheriff Buddy Deweese was spokesman for the law enforcement officers during efforts to obtain legislation enabling Twin Falls County workers to hold an election on the question.

He said Friday some of the county employes have suggested checking the legality of the election question. The legislature passed a law making it mandatory for all counties not participating in the state retirement program to hold an election to permit workers to decide if they wished to come under the state plan.

The question in Tuesday's election, worded in a "yes" and "no" format, "Should the county (Twin Falls) retain the county retirement program?"

Deweese also said the county plan which costs the worker 2 per cent of his first $5500 a month and 3.5 per cent of all salary over that, is far more costly to taxpayers if a majority of employes join.

He said the state plan would require the county to pay about 7 per cent of each worker's monthly salary as county matching money.

Under the county's private retirement program contracted through Wyatt Co., San Francisco, he said, the county must pay 19.65 per cent of each monthly employe. However, there are only 36 of the 119 county workers who subscribe to the retirement program, which county commissioners say will save taxpayers money in the long run. The state plan is mandatory for all workers and the county plan is elective.

Law enforcement officers would pay about 5 per cent of their salary and the county 19.65 per cent, under the state plan but they would have an option of retirement at age 55 because of the nature of their work.

Farm work helps boost 'Kiss' sales in Jerome

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

JEROME — Why is the "fiendish" rock group Kiss selling three times better in Jerome than any other artist or group?

Tesa Bradley, owner of the newly-opened Royalty Records, says because farmers are too busy now to express their musical preferences.

"The farmers come in to buy in the winter," she says. "Some people are out working hard in the summer and don't have time to get in or listen."

She says she's sure country and western music lovers will show up more after the harvest is in.

Mrs. Bradley got her first experience selling music in her native Great Britain. In one big dealer's store where she worked, each king of music was given a separate floor.

After moving to this country, she worked 16 years in music stores in Twin Falls before going into business on her own.

"Jerome just needed a music store, and a lot of people have said so since I've opened," Mrs. Bradley explains. The Bradley family lives at nearby Sugarloaf where her husband Bill farms.

Royalty Records stocks tapes as well as albums and bit single records. Sheet music, method books for piano and guitar, and a few extras like posters and belt buckles are on hand as well.

Mrs. Bradley says the 45's are "very popular" because Jerome top forty buyers tend to travel to Twin Falls before.

"I go by what the kids want and by what I can predict is going up on the national chart," she said about keeping up with the latest demands.

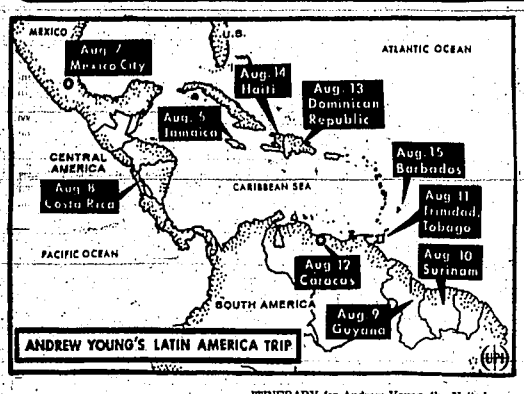

A heartthrob named Shaun Cassidy is hot at the moment she says, and his poster-sized picture in the window draws a lot of attention from passing young girls.

Representing the country contingent, Waylon Jennings, Kenny Rodgers and Crystal Gayle are top sellers at the store but two past greats have a following too. They are Bob Wills, who created country swing, and Jimmie Rodgers, famous for Mule Skinner Blues and Blue Yodel No. 1 (T for Texas).

"The only thing you don't sell is soul," Mrs. Bradley says. "It can go to number one and they still won't buy it, except for Stevie Wonder."

Her own appreciation of music ranges from Strauss Waltzes to Queen, a rock group, to opera to Olivia Newton John.

"I like all kinds of music," she says, and adds, "You have to to work in a music store."

License revocation upheld

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) District Judge Frank Gregory today upheld a decision by the state to revoke the license of Sierra Life Insurance Co., of Twin Falls, Ida., to write policies in Nevada.

The judge ruled that technical errors made by State Insurance Commissioner Dick Rottman in the certificate revocation procedure were harmless. He said the alleged violation of state regulations by Sierra was proven and the firm did not refute them.

The judge said that it would only be "a waste of time" to send the matter back for another administrative hearing.

Sierra had filed suit after it lost its license in 1975 claiming it was exempt from Nevada's regulations on grounds it was a foreign corp.; that the notice of revocation was faulty and that there wasn't sufficient grounds for the action.

Rottman had notified the company that it no longer met the minimum capital and surplus requirements under Nevada law and had called the firm insolvent.

Sierra Life had about 385 customers in Nevada before it lost its license. It also operated in other western states and has about 18,000 to 20,000 policy holders.

Sierra Life has filed a $1.4 million libel suit against Rottman and his Chief Deputy Vernon Leverty in federal court in Boise, Ida., in connection with the revocation.

Rock group 'Kiss' grabs teenagers' imaginations

Music dealers in the Magic Valley say Kiss album sales are a stable item in their business. Ron Victor, manager of Sound Limited, Twin Falls, says, "We do sell a tremendous amount of Kiss. They're No. 1 in their classification of music."

"Kiss is one of the real standbys," Doug Maughan, the Music Center, Twin Falls, says. "You can't run a record store without them."

In Burley, Bob Johnston, manager of Mark's Music, says, "They've always been consistent sellers. They're probably the biggest selling group overall."

And in Jerome, Tesa Bradley, owner of Royalty Records, says Kiss has sold three times more albums and tapes than any other group of artists.

"They're just eating them up."

Gary Briggs, co-owner of Budget Tapes and Records, Twin Falls, says, "I don't know where they (teenagers) get the money, but they do."

Ketchum's Idaho Light and Sound music store reports the group sells "real well with young kids, mostly about 12."

Music dealers estimate most fans are between the ages of 10 and 17.

KEEP Radio disc jockey Leslie Koorhand says the group's lastest single, "Christine 16," has become one of the station's most requested songs. According to the Gavin Reports, which gauges radio playing value, "Christine" is a prime mover for "top addon" for radio station playing lists around the country. It climbed to No. 3 on a Salt Lake City radio station chart and is No. 35 in Twin Falls.

Proposals solicited

BOISE (UPI) — Public proposals for feasible alternatives to construction of a coal-fired generating plant that could be in operation by 1985 to meet Idaho Power Company's energy requirements were invited today by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Idaho Power has applied to the commission for permission to construct a 500 megawatt coal-fired generating plant in southern Idaho. Three locations have been proposed — the vicinity of American Falls, Sid's Crossing near Shoshone or Bliss.

Congress' word on water final, Church declares

WASHINGTON — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said today it is "up to Congress to make federal water policy, not the Federal Water Resources Council."

Church said that includes any decisions relating to interbasin water diversions.

The Idaho senator, who is sponsoring legislation that would extend for 10 more years the current moratorium on water diversion studies, said he was disturbed by a series of hearings being held by the council across the country to discuss "options" for solutions to "problems" the council has identified in federal water policy.

Many of the items on the agenda for these hearings, said Church, "are of special concern to Idahoans and go beyond mere discussion of possible changes in policy to modifications in law which would completely upset existing water rights."

For example, Church noted, one of the "problems" listed for discussion concerns alleged "inflexibility" caused by state water law which "may result in interstate and regional programs such as interbasin (water) transfers and regional plans for resource development being more difficult to obtain."

"I would remind the Federal Water Resources Council that existing law specifically prohibits interbasin water diversion out of the Northwest. These restrictions were written into the law for good reason," Church said.

Church said the law which created the Council contained language prohibiting it from studying, planning, or recommending water diversion.

The point is that it is the Congress which will determine federal water policy. While discussion of policy through these hearings may be helpful, it should be strictly understood that Congress will have the final say," Church added.

Church and former Sen. Len Jordan wrote the law in 1968 that imposed a moratorium on any studies of water diversion, and Church has introduced legislation this year to extend the moratorium another decade.

Eviction by force

SHERIFF Richard Hongisto, above, swings a sledgehammer to batter down a door in San Francisco's International Hotel Thursday during eviction of more than 50 persons from the building. At right, an elderly tenant on crutches is led out by an officer. More than 300 police and sheriff's deputies needed 24 hours to clear the hotel. They had to force their way through more than 1,000 demonstrators blocking the entrance. Hongisto spent five days in jail in May on contempt charges because he didn't proceed with the eviction.

Rockwell stock sale probe asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman and the top lawyer of Rockwell International Corp. sold one-sixth of their Rockwell stock for $1.4 million 10 days before President Carter killed the firm's B1 bomber, it was revealed Thursday.

A company spokesman said the sales were ethical, but there were quick calls in Congress today for an investigation.

Rockwell was scheduled to build the controversial B1 until Carter made the tightly-guarded announcement June 30 that he was ending production.

The cutoff shocked many, including key members of Congress who had predicted Carter would either continue the program in full or cut production only slightly.

Rockwell Chairman Willard F. Rockwell Jr. and general counsel John J. Rosela reported the sales — about one-sixth of their stock in Rockwell — to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Rockwell president Robert Anderson reported the sale of 5,000 shares for $166,000 — onesixth of his holdings — a few weeks earlier.

Willard Rockwell, Rosela and Anderson could not be reached in telephone calls to corporate headquarters in Pittsburgh. Two company spokesmen said the officers were en route to a directors' meeting today in California.

It is a violation of federal securities law for a principal corporate officer to benefit from information not known to the general public. Officials of the SEC, which oversees public corporations, declined to comment on the Rockwell transactions.

Carter's decision on the expensive aircraft was a tightly guarded secret and his announcement came as a surprise to officials. Washington Secretary of Defense Harold Brown has said he did not know it until the day before it was announced.

But Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., said he will ask his House Commerce investigations subcommittee to "look at it," and House Democratic leader Jim Wright said "I believe the superficial appearance is enough to warrant an inquiry by the Moss subcommittee."

And Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said the transaction "certainly deserves to be reviewed by the SEC and the Justice Department."

SEC records also showed that Willard Rockwell sold 6,366 shares from a family trust April 11. Although securities regulations required the reporting of such a transaction by May 10, the report was not filed until June.

In April, the United California Bank, trustee for the employe's Rockwell International Corporation Savings Plan made net purchases of more than 142,000 shares as Carter reviewed the program and Congress moved toward approval of financing.

Rockwell sold 36,200 shares and Roscia sold 2,000 shares on June 20 for almost $1.4 million.

US pays abortion bill for 2 months

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the next two months, a poor woman will be able to get an abortion at federal government expense only if a doctor says her life would be endangered if she gave birth.

The House and Senate still are sharply divided on what the rules will be beyond that time.

Those are essentials of the situation following action on the abortion issue in a federal court and in Congress Thursday.

A year ago Congress decreed that federal money could not be used for abortions under the Medicaid program "except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term."

That language, known as the Hyde amendment for Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., was blocked in the courts, and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare continued to finance abortions at a rate of 300,000 a year.

But on Thursday, after some prodding by the Supreme Court, U.S. District Judge John Dooling, in the Eastern District of New York, lifted an injunction and said the Hyde amendment should take effect — until the end of the fiscal year Sept. 30, when it expires.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said beginning immediately the department "will provide federal financial participation in the cost of abortions" only when the attending physician certifies it is necessary to save the life of the woman.

The House, meanwhile, wants to continue the Hyde amendment through the next fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1. The Senate rejected that stand on a vote of 59 to 34 Thursday and called for a second round of House-Senate negotiations. An earlier round ended in disagreement.

The Senate's position is that abortion funds should be allowed not only to save the life of the mother but also in cases of rape and incest, or where a doctor says it is "medically necessary."

Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., said the term "medically necessary" is needed to permit abortions to poor women in cases where the health of the mother or baby would be in serious danger.

"We must not say to poor women that we have no concern for their health or the health of the fetus which the House language would force them to bear," Brooke said.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said it is "a question of discrimination.... The fact is poor women will not get abortions (under the House proposal) and middle-class and wealthy women will get them" because they can afford them.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said the term "medically necessary" would be a license to finance abortions "on demand."

Brooke asked if a young poor woman, pregnant as a result of being "abused by her father," should be allowed an abortion.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., dismissed the question as a "red herring," and said the number of cases would be "infinitesimal."

"What about one case?" Brooke persisted.

"If the Senator knows of one such case, I wish he would put it before the Senate," Helms replied, "and I will pay for the abortion."

Gas tax hike rejected

© Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — The House, rebuffing President Carter and the Democratic leadership, has clobbered proposals to increase the federal gasoline tax by 4 cents and 5 cents a gallon.

With voter backlash foremost on their minds, legislators made it clear that they weren't willing to risk their political careers for a tax increase proponents admitted would have only a minuscule effect on dampening gasoline consumption.

When the 5-cent gasoline tax hike came up for a vote, the House chamber resounded with a deafening roar of "no" that led Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., to hold his ears in mock pain. The lopsided vote was 339 to 82.

A proposal by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., to double the current 4-cent-a-gallon federal gasoline tax was crushed by an even wider margin, 370 to 52.

Hours after handing Carter and company its first significant defeat on a massive energy bill expected to win final approval today, the House evened the score for the day by defeating a proposal to give some of a new Multibillion-dollar crude oil tax to oil producers. The 223-to-198 vote was similar to the margin by which the House rejected deregulation of natural gas on Wednesday.

The so-called "plowback" for oil producers was the most heavily lobbied amendment of the week. "Blue Cross is going to raise our group rates if the arm-twisting doesn't slow down," Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said.

Virtually assured of quashing deregulation, the administration focused all week on killing the plowback, largely for symbolic reasons. All along, the White House has emphasized the importance of avoiding even the appearance that Big Oil would benefit from the Carter program, which socks it to consumers.

As now written, the bill would return receipts for the wellhead tax on crude oil, which would raise the price of domestic oil to the world level in three year, to consumers — at least for the first year.

Auto plants stay open

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The threat of an auto industry shutdown because of a congressional delay on air pollution legislation is over.

The Senate late Thursday night voted final congressional approval to the bill after daylong negotiations on both sides of the Capitol to meet a filibuster threat. The package includes easing of 1977 auto emission standards in a move expected to make it easier for car manufacturers to meet federal auto efficiency guidelines.

The measure now goes to President Carter, who brought national attention to the automaker's problem when he urged Congress to act on the bill before going on its August recess set to start tonight.

Ironically, the struggle for the amendments, which ease auto exhaust standards but help protect some areas from deterioration of their air, was concluded in only seven minutes of floor debate followed by a voice vote of approval at 10:28 p.m. EDT Thursday.

An hour earlier it was obvious the end was near.

Sen. Edmund Muskie, DMaine, chairman of the House-Senate conference which drew up the compromise bill, was smiling and walking down the center aisle of the chamber with Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah.

Earlier in the day, Garn had threatened to filibuster the bill, as he did in 1976 in a maneuver which killed a similar compromise.

Probe shortcut appears

© Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The House Ethics Committee and the Justice Department have reached agreement on an exchange of information that could shortcut the congressional investigation of Korean influence-buying on Capitol Hill.

The agreement, which seemingly removes the immediate threat of a courtroom confrontation between the executive and legislative branches over evidence in the probe, will give Ethics Committee investigators access to testimony and documents accumulated during a year-long criminal investigation by a federal grand jury.

Among the material the House panel has been seeking from the Justice Department is reported to be a list detailing alleged payments to members of Congress from Tongsun Park, the fugitive Korean business man whose activities lie at the heart of the investigation.

Jury gave 'too much'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal appeals court says the estimated $12 million in damages awarded 1,200 antiwar protestors arrested on the Capitol steps in May of 1971 was too high.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld 2 to 1 a jury's decision to award damages for false arrest, false imprisonment and violations of freedom of expression.

But it ruled the U.S. District Court jury's award of $7,500 per person alloted for violation of First Amendment rights was "totally out of proportion to any harm that has been suffered."

"The loss of an opportunity to demonstrate constitutes loss of First Amendment rights in their most pristine and classic form," Circuit Judge J. Skelly Wright wrote, but it "does not mean that monetary recompense should be extravagant."

The court ordered the District Court to reconsider the amount of that portion of the damages.

The jury awarded about $12 million total damages in the class action suit which named U.S. Capitol Police Chief James Powell, the District of Columbia and former District Police Chief Jerry Wilson as defendants. The amount came to about $10,000 for each person arrested with the bulk of that — $7,500 — awarded for violation of First Amendment guarantees.

Warren Kaplan, a lawyer representing the American Civil Liberties Union, said this was the first successful class action suit ever brought for damages in a mass arrest situation.

He said he was pleased the court agreed with most legal points raised by the protestors. "The important thing is now how many dollars are awarded," he said.

The arrests occurred May 5, 1971, when 2,000 persons gathered on the Capitol steps to hear speeches by congressmen and others in the third day of mass May Day demonstrations, concluding weeks of war protests in Washington.

While protestors argued they had acted peacefully, police said they feared for the safety of Capitol buildings amid noise, disorder and confusion.

Judge Edward Tamm, dissenting, said the majority acted in an "ivory tower atmosphere," without looking at the rally in the context of protests which began April 18, 1971, and "accelerated in size, volume and violence to the dimensions of a Putsch or rebellion."

Meet set

COMMERCE Secretary Juanita Kreps said in Detroit Thursday President Carter will call a White House conference next spring to draft federal policies for stimulating more jobs and balanced economic growth among states. She said the meeting will pinpoint states where growth is too rapid as well as those with high unemployment.

Gays seek air notice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of gay rights groups today asked the Federal Communications Commission to ensure that broadcasters not ignore the existence of the gay community in their programs.

A petition filed with the FCC asked the agency to require broadcasters to consult local gay leaders to develop programming that will give adequate representation to the gays. Broadcasters are now required to consult with 19 specific groups, but gays are not included.

Americans favor new Cuba links

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans, by more than 2 to 1, want to see diplomatic and economic relations with Cuba restored — but on terms favorable to the United States, according to a Washington-based research organization.

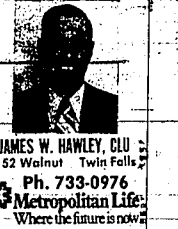

Potomac Associates said those surveyed oppose the advance concession of partially lifting the U.S. trade embargo (52 to 30 per cent); and are against accepting Cuban claims for damages suffered from the embargo or in the Bay of Pigs invasion (59 to 15 per cent).

Cuba should cut back its military forces in Africa and release U.S. political prisoners from Cuban jails, the report said.

Other findings, based on a Gallup poll, showed most Americans consider Cuba a security threat strongly under the influence of the Soviets and moost are uninformed about Cuba — only 37 per cent of those surveyed knew about the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay.

Carter's alien plan treats only symptoms

President Carter has a big heart.

Thursday he proposed citizenship for millions of illegal aliens who sneaked into the United States before 1970 and have been working here ever since.

Under the Carter plan, aliens who have lived in America continuously since 1970 could apply for permanent residency and seek U.S. citizenship in five years.

That's big of the President.

But nobody knows how many illegal aliens reside in the country. The nightmare of trying to determine which aliens arrived before 1970 and which arrived later has the Immigration and Naturalization Service shuddering.

Then there is the problem of what the President does with the aliens who arrived after 1970 and will arrive today.

The new presidential proposal to grant amnesty to aliens who crept into the country seven years ago doesn't address the day-to-day problem of aliens entering the country.

Yes, Carter proposes tougher border patrols with Mexico to pinch the flow of aliens.

But the Mexican workers will still get in, by the thousands and tens of thousands.

Mexico's unemployment rate stands at 20 per cent. The average Mexican wage earner brings home less than $50 a week.

Within 50 years Mexico's population will equal that of the United States.

Under these circumstances, is it any wonder many unemployed or poorly paid Mexicans decide to risk a swim across the Rio Grande for a promised land to the north?

They will come because American agriculture offers them jobs. The employment opportunities for illegal aliens remain as strong today as they have ever been.

Carter proposes penalties for employment of illegal aliens, fines of up to $1000.

The fines, while popular with some congressmen, unjustly penalize many farmers who would be happy to employ Americans as laborers but can't find any.

The illegal alien question is one of the most complicated human and political problems facing the nation. It touches millions of lives and involves such passionate national concerns as the unemployment rate, and the cost of welfare and social security.

The President should be commended for tackling a tough problem. Granting amnesty and potential citizenship to the already arrived aliens is a compassionate stance.

But Carter's illegal alien policy doesn't deal with the social and economic forces which lead to the flow of aliens across the American-Mexican border.

Treating the symptoms of the illegal alien dilemma ultimately won't cure the problem.

The aliens will still come to America because they want to escape Mexico and this nation's farmers need them.

Until this reality is changed, the illegal alien problem will not be solved.

Editorial breaks rules in advice

By MIKE ROYKO
© Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — As a rule, newspaper editorials try to give sound, prudent advice to the readers.

So I was surprised by an editorial I read this morning in another Chicago paper.

It dealt with the recent wave of gangland murders. Naturally it decried them, which is the traditional position to take.

But then it said:

"A few specific Chicagoans have a chance to help, of course.

"Assured of protection, those who witness crimes should break the traditional code of a malignant silence. Their courage can mean the whole city's gain."

What kind of thing is that to tell people? Somebody might actually believe it.

Have they so quickly forgotten that the last guy who broke the traditional code of silence was one Bobby Lowe, who used to be an obscure gas station jockey?

Lowe is the man who happened to be walking his dog the night a neighbor was used as a skeet.

Lowe came forward. He stood right up in court and pointed a shaky finger at Harry Aleman, the noted evil-doer, and said Harry was on the other end of the shotgun that night.

But the judge didn't believe him. Maybe he figured that anybody who would testify against somebody like Harry Aleman must be a lunatic.

So where is Lowe today?

He's probably somewhere in the Mojave Desert, disguised to look like a cactus plant, wondering when Harry Aleman is going to show up and point something other than a finger at him.

If a person who happens to witness one of our gangland killings decides that he wants to be a good citizen, his first problem is whom to tell about it.

The police, you say? That would be the right-thing-to-do-if-your-neighbor-were beating his wife, or your wife, or somebody was walking across your roof at 3 a.m.

But a syndicate killing is another matter.

If you walked into a police station and said that you just saw Louis the Ox twist off the head of Willie the Mole, the cop might say: "You are a good and honest citizen. Just wait right here."

Then he might go to a phone in the back, dial it, and say: "Louie, some mope just walked in here and said he saw you twist off Willie's head. You're welcome, Louie. And remember — no checks or money orders. Send cash."

The fact is the Syndicate has done a much better job of infiltrating the police department than vice versa.

The FBI might be a better bet. But the problem is that it isn't against the federal laws to kill somebody. The FBI would be more effective if you saw Harry Aleman stealing your mail.

Assuming you found a policeman who cared, you would then have to (a) quit your job (b) be moved to a location outside this city or state and (c) have your wife and children hidden away, too, until the trial was held.

Then, like Bobby Lowe, you would wind up being cross-examined in court more thoroughly than the accused killer. There were times when spectators weren't sure if Aleman was on trial for murder, or if Lowe was on trial for having once ducked paying a finance company.

After the trial is over and the judge has sent somebody like Aleman back on the street, you have no other problem except where you and your family can go to hide the rest of your life.

No, I believe that the wisest thing a Chicagoan can do when he sees one Syndicate mug aerating another Syndicate mug is to go home and hide under the bed.

The people around the old Taylor-Halsted neighborhood, where the Syndicate cut its first baby teeth, knew how to be good citizens.

Years ago somebody was always getting knocked off, usually in the middle of the afternoon in front of the whole neighborhood. But when the police would show up and ask questions, it went like this:

"Did you see him shot?"

"Who?"

"Him."

"Who him?"

"Him? Oh, is he drunk?"

"Shot. See the hole in his forehead?"

"Oh."

"Did you see who did it?"

"Did what?"

"Shot him."

"Shot who?"

"The fellow by your left foot."

"At noon?"

"I work nights."

"You didn't hear anything?"

"I'm stone deaf."

"But you can hear me."

"Who?"

Carter's progress gets growls

By JAMES RESTON
© N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Here it is August, over six months since Jimmy Carter strolled into the White House, and he hasn't even solved the problems of inflation and unemployment, or tamed the Russians or brought peace to the Middle East.

So the grumbling has begun. The mayors, the governors, the labor union and business leaders, the blacks, the allies and the editorial writers are all expressing their disappointments. In short, everything's normal, the exaggerated early hopes of the administration have given way to the predictable growls of the Opposition.

On the whole, the Carterization of Washington has been a bumpy but instructive exercise. The economy has gone a little better than expected, and foreign policy a little worse. Everything has been re-examined and nothing dramatic has happened, but there is more human energy at work here now, more willingness to explore and exchange ideas, and as time goes on, a more practical grasp of what can and cannot be done by a new administration.

In personal terms, Carter has made considerable progress. He has driven himself hard. He has won the respect of the Congress, the cabinet and the bureaucracy. He has dominated the news and increased the narrow margin of his popularity with the American people. He has disappointed the hopes of his most liberal supporters and quieted some of the fears of his most conservative opponents but in political terms he has clearly established himself in the decisive middle ground of American politics.

Looking back on his first six months, it may be that this personal achievement was his main short-run goal. After all, he was nominated against the will of most of the elders of his party, and he squeaked into the presidency without any commanding record, mandate, or presidential presence. Accordingly, he had to establish himself personally, to make clear at home and abroad that he had the intelligence, character and grace to sit at the head of the White House table.

This he has done, with an unusual combination of courtesy and cunning, of corn and cloth. He has a genius for listening to everybody and sending them away thinking (correctly) that he understands their problems, and (incorrectly) that he is sympathetic to their remedies.

In short, he is both a preacher and a politician, as metaphysical as Woodrow Wilson and as active and pragmatic as Franklin Roosevelt. He preaches against inflation and protectionism, but pays off the the maritime lobby with subsidies that are both inflationary and protectionist. He preaches against the arms merchants, but expands the sale of American arms in the Middle East. He preaches coexistence with the Soviet Union, and consultation with the Allies, but leaves both in doubt about his aims and methods and sees no contradiction between his sermons and his policies.

Perhaps the most surprising thing about his first months has been his preoccupation with foreign affairs. There is an element of pride and presumption in this. He has seemed determined to prove that he was a master of the field he knew very little about, but at least he had a purpose: After Vietnam and Watergate, he wanted to demonstrate that the White House was once more a center of moral authority presiding over a foreign policy that paid attention to human rights.

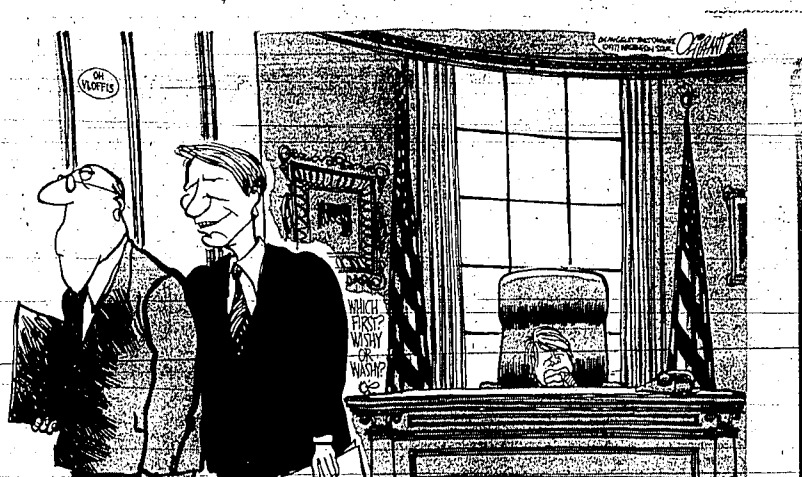

And in this he has succeeded, though at the cost of increased tension with the Soviets, who are terrified of human freedom, and deny to Carter the propaganda of ideas which they claim for themselves.

So the record is mixed, with the pluses outnumbering the minuses. The United States stands at the end of Carter's first six months as the most stable of the industrial democracies, politically and economically. And if its diplomacy has sometimes seemed a little sudden and even capricious, at least Carter has led the way in trying to compose the nation's differences with Panama, Cuba and Mexico, and to avoid war in the Middle East, Rhodesia and South Africa.

If he has not achieved his own objectives for the first six months, it is probably because he attempted too much too soon, and overestimated his ability to control events beyond his command; but going into his second six months, there is considerable evidence that he is adjusting to the realities.

He seems more flexible and far less ideological than when he first entered the White House. There is little evidence that he has any Grand Design. He is proving to be an innovator, and an improviser, and in his dealings with the Congress, a prudent compromiser. In the process, he has ended the politics of abuse which have divided this city for many years, and that in itself is a relief.

The next six months will provide him with different tests, for having established his position and listened patiently to everybody on all sides of foreign and domestic policy, he will have to choose between them, and that will be a much more difficult task.

"COME BACK TOMORROW AND TRY FOR A DECISION — WE'RE BEING WISHY WASHY TODAY."

Questions remain in Lance's case

By WILLIAM SAFIRE
©N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — "You have been smeared," Sen. Abe Ribicoff told OMB Director Lance last week, declaring no investigation was needed. Republican Charles Percy solemnly agreed. President Carter reaffirmed his faith in his old friend's "impeccable integrity."

Editorial writers on The New York Times and Washington Post tut-tutted gently at this brazen whitewash, awaiting only a report from Carter's new comptroller of the currency. By not asking the President a single question about his first scandal at his press conference last week, the White House press corps completed its transformation from hound dog to lap dog.

A few questions that senators and reporters did not see fit to raise:

1. Lance has sworn that the reason he switched his $2.7 million loan from the Manufacturers Hanover Bank in New York to the First Chicago was that he had assured "Manny Hanny" repayment when he left the presidency of his own bank. Was that really a condition of the loan? Does it not suggest collusion to make the personal loan because of the correspondent bank relationship, and not on its merits?

2. When Lance refinanced his loan after the election, switching from Manny Hanny to First Chicago, he borrowed an additional $725,000. He swears this was primarily for "debt service." Does that mean he was in arrears on his New York loan? On any other loans? Was this extra money to help pay future interest? Did Manufacturers Hanover want to continue its loan — or was that bank delighted to see First Chicago take it over?

3. Lance's long-time pattern has been to use a "correspondent bank" relationship to borrow money personally. Is the comptroller looking into all those double deals, or has his inquiry been limited to the Chicago sweetheart loan?

4. When Sen. Heinz (R-Pa.) asked the only cogent question of the hearing — about Lance's collateral on his Chicago loan — the witness suddenly could not remember such trifling details. Lance had previously sworn, however, the loan was "fully collateralized" — with what? Why can't we know?

5. On the assumption that most of his Chicago loan was collateralized by his Georgia bank stock, what happened at First Chicago when the stock's price dropped from 16 to 8? Did First Chicago call the Loan, or demand more collateral; as it surely would do with normal borrowers on nonsweetheart loans?

6. What are the terms of the loan made to Lance by the Butcher brothers of Tennessee, whom Lance then introduced to Secretary of Treasury Blumenthal? Will the comptroller look for a triangular relationship between Lance, Manufacturers Hanover, and the Butcher brothers?

7. Under 18 U.S. Code 656, and after the 1975 decision in U. S. versus Brookshire, the U. S. attorney in Atlanta began an investigation into misapplication of funds in Lance's banking operations. On Dec. 2, 1976, one day before President-elect Carter named Lance to his cabinet, U.S. Attorney John Stokes ordered the investigation quashed, over the objections of his investigators. Stokes, a Nixon appointee, was then continued in the U.S. attorney's office by Lance's friend, Griffin Bell. Stokes denies a quid pro quo, and quit last week. Did the deal fall apart?

8. The FBI prepared a report based on the aborted investigation and submitted it to the White House before Lance's Senate confirmation hearings. Robert Lipschutz, the President's counsel and Lance's Atlanta friend and associate, improperly withheld this disturbing information from the Senate.

Has Lipschutz passed on this evidence of an earlier pattern of misapplication of funds to Comptroller John Heimann — or is he still trying to contain the inquiry to the Chicago loan (the limited hangout route)?

9. Since questions were raised about Lance's wheeling and dealing, Carter fund raisers have launched a frantic angel-hunt to find an "investor" to buy the Lance bank stock at about $1 million over its market value. In my opinion, at the inflated price, the sale would be a fraud, since it would not involve control stock.

What of the other investors who cannot, like Lance, get $17 a share for a stock selling at $11? Is the SEC asleep? Will Team Player Blumenthal's IRS not consider the payoff premium to be ordinary income?

10. Time magazine led the way into this story, with Newsweek aggressively following up; the Atlanta Constitution must have resisted pressure from Lance to suppress this column, but almost everyone else is "waiting for Proxmire," the only senator to have voted against the Lance confirmation.

Which leads to the question sure to be asked after the truth has been forced out: Where were you during the cover-up of the first scandal of the Carter administration?

Board term among Benoit's favorite years

(Editor's Note: With the close of this month's budget meetings, Twin Falls attorney Edward L. Benoit completed a term of more than four years on the Idaho Board of Education.)

Benoit was appointed to the board by Gov. Cecil Andrus in 1973 to replace Twin Falls businessman Joseph McCollum, who had resigned. Benoit, who served as board chairman prior to announcing his retirement, said last spring he wanted to leave the board to devote more time to his private life and law practice.

With his board service behind him, Benoit agreed last week to give the Times-News his assessment of educational issues in Idaho. The interview, which appears in its substance below, was the second Benoit had granted in connection with his work on the state board.

The interview followed by a few days Gov. John Evans' announcement that he had named former Jerome school board member and teacher, Cheryl Hymas, as Benoit's replacement.

A Twin Falls native, Benoit followed in his father's footsteps in becoming an attorney.

"I've intended to become a lawyer all my life," he said. "From the time I was a little boy I was going to be a lawyer."

Now 56, Benoit still devotes most of his energy to law. He says he has never owned a gun nor a fishing pole "and I'm a lousy golfer, so I don't know what I'd do if I tapered off work."

Benoit and his wife, Norma Lou, are the parents of two daughters.

Times-News: Do you have any advice for Cheryl Hymas as to how to conduct herself as a board member, the kind of pressures she will be under?

Benoit: "No, I haven't got any advice for her — she's got to face the questions as they come and vote her honest conviction, and that's about all she can do."

T-N: What do you think was the toughest thing you had to do while you were on the board?

Benoit: "I think the problem of stretching the dollars available among the institutions was the toughest thing of all. The toughest one is every year when you have to try to come up with figures which you think are somewhat realistic — they're always too low — and then convince the governor's budget office and the legislature that these monies should be appropriated.

"The way that costs are escalating for maintenance of buildings and insurance, giving cost-of-living wage increases, and utility costs, at some point, in my opinion, a decision is going to have to be made either to ask for an increase in tax or take another look at the tuition situation in Idaho . . . We have the lowest fees of any state schools in the northwest. Tuition as such is not levied, but student fees are levied.

"What I have always proposed is that a constitutional amendment be prepared and presented to the people to vote on whether or not they want tuition at the institutions of higher learning — because I can't believe that back in the late 1800s that the people who put in such a constitutional provision could have foreseen the mushrooming of higher education we have now. . . .

"I would never if I were on the board and had the authority to levy tuition, I'd never want to get it so high that it was going to deprive a student of a chance to have his education, but I do think the students should pay a little more money.

"The other alternatives of course, if you don't get more money and if this inflation continues, there's going to have to be reallocation of resources within the institutions — that is, they'll be forced to take a look at what programs are most productive and what can we afford to give, and maybe, just have to drop some programs.

T-N: What will happen to school finances when the counties are forced to assess property at full market value with a 20 per cent assessment ratio as required by 1982?

> 'I would never, if I were on the board and had the authority to levy tuition, I'd never want to get it so high that it was going to deprive a student of a chance to have his education. . . .'

Benoit: "I predict that they'll reduce the levies, which, in effect, will keep your taxes about where they are, because if they don't you're going to have a revolution on your hands."

T-N: What about equalizing the property tax base for students in the various state school districts? Do you think some effort should be made to equalize the amount of monies spent per child?

Benoit: "I'd like to see more equalization of public school funds throughout the state. You look at some of the inequities and high taxes and low taxes. I don't think it's quite right. I don't know who's gonna come up with the formula, but the legislature wrestles with that one every year, and if it's going to be done, it's going to have to be done by the state legislature."

T-N: Would you lean toward state funding entirely and getting away from local property tax levies?

Benoit: "No. I really wouldn't want entire state funding because if you had entire state funding I think it would result in the loss of a lot of the authority of the local school boards. I'm a firm believer that whenever possible the state board of education should not in any way interfere with local school board decisions . . . I prefer if possible the local school districts work out their own problems and the state put out as few regulations as possible concerning public schools.

T-N: In the past you've said you were in favor of school district consolidation, that's true, isn't it?

Benoit: "I'm still in favor of consolidation. What do we have, seven high school districts in Twin Falls County alone? With consolidation you can eliminate some of the overhead expense, you can have larger schools and offer more courses that can't be offered in the smaller schools. However, I don't think you'll ever get consolidation, because I don't think the legislature would vote for it. And I think one of the things is the old headache of interscholastic athletics. If you consolidate you have one football team and one basketball team, and then you're playing with people's emotions and local pride. I don't see how you're going to have consolidation.

T-N: What is your feeling about collective bargaining for teachers and unionization?

Benoit: "I'm opposed to and always will be opposed to any law allowing public employes of any kind to form unions. Is that straight enough? It's just against my philosophy that the public employes such as garbage collectors in New York get to the point where they can tie up a city. I still believe that in this small state of Idaho that if school boards are reasonable, and if the teachers in the schools can handle their own negotiations through their own local representatives, they can come up with just as good a solution as to form a union and hire a union negotiator. Because all you do is then turn over all your decisions to your hired negotiator. If I were a teacher, I wouldn't want the hired negotiator speaking for me."

T-N: If you were a teacher would you want some voice with the school board?

Benoit: "If I were a teacher I would want to, through my local teachers' association, be able to have access to a school board and present problems. After all, every other meeting we have with higher education the faculty representatives from each of the four institutions of higher learning are there . . . and they're free to discuss with us anything that they want to."

T-N: Do you see any indication that the AAUP (American Association of University Professors) will become more militant than it has been?

Benoit: "Not in Idaho. I don't see any real move toward unionization in higher education in Idaho. Those professors know that dollars are limited, and they know that the board of education has done all they can to try to keep them partially even with the increased cost of living . . . If you're paying all you can, what good does it do to strike for money? We're just talking about public monies, and if the legislature appropriates dollars for salaries that's all you can pay . . . I don't think we have that big dissatisfaction at any of the university campuses."

T-N: What about the function of the community college? Do you think more community colleges are needed in Idaho?

Benoit: "The only possibilities in that area would be for Lewis and Clark to change from a four-year school to a community college, which I don't think is practical. I think a community college in Idaho Falls might be feasible. However, again, I think it's almost too late to start one up there if the people up there wanted to. You've got to remember when CSI was built there were more federal funds available than there are now. With the cost-of-building-and-everything, I just doubt that you could get the voters in the Idaho Falls area to go to a community college."

T-N: Would you like to see the state's two existing junior colleges come under the supervision of the state board?

Benoit: "No, I would not. After all, the people in Twin Falls and Jerome counties are paying taxes, they have some bonded indebtedness. I just hope the junior college boards can stay independent."

> 'I don't think you'll ever see the day that they'll be offering athletic scholarships to women . . . I think they'd rather keep it the way it is.'

T-N: What about athletics in higher education? Do you think there's too much emphasis on athletics?

Benoit: "I'll tell you, intercollegiate athletics, the problems of intercollegiate athletics and financing, has been a real pain in the neck since I've been on the board. It's given problems, disputes about student fees being used for athletics, disputes about public monies being used for athletics, and it is a problem because so many people have different viewpoints as to intercollegiate athletics. I think it's going to be a problem and dispute forever — I don't think there is a solution.

"However, I personally feel that some general fund money should go to the institutions for athletic purposes because I think it's really money spent for public relations. Intercollegiate athletics I think is important in keeping the ties between alumni and their school — and I think that's important."

T-N: Do you foresee the day when women's sports will have the drawing power that men's sports now have?

Benoit: "No, and I think an example of that is to look at men's golf tournaments and women's golf tournaments and the purses nationwide. I don't think really that women's — I think women's athletics — I like to see it as not a business. I think they involve themselves in that for pleasure, and I think these young ladies at our universities participate in sports just for pleasure. I don't think you'll ever see the day that they'll be offering athletic scholarships to women, and I doubt very much that any of the women's athletic directors at any of the institutions would want that. I think they'd rather keep it the way it is."

T-N: Then, conversely, do you think that male athletics are a business, redshirting and so forth?

Benoit: "I don't think they're a business in Idaho. There's not enough money involved, but I think they are nationwide."

T-N: What do you think is the function of the state board? If they can't match the professional educator in expertise, what's the importance of the board?

Benoit: "You've got to have a governing board somewhere . . . We're in the process right now of reviewing various graduate programs at the four institutions, and as a result of this review some of the institutions are dropping or consolidating some of their graduate programs."

T-N: What about the role of the students now compared to the Vietnam years?

Benoit: "As I said before, when we have our joint meetings with all university representatives we have the student body presidents there, and I don't think since I've been on the board not one student fee has been imposed or increased without prior consultation with the student representatives, pros and cons, and usually when we get through, they've agreed that the fee increase is necessary but they've had input, and I think that's what they want . . . If a fee increase has ever been proposed that hasn't been discussed with the students, we've turned it down. And I'll tell you, those students, the ones I see, they're all intelligent and they're vocal, and they're heard, I'll guarantee you."

T-N: As an example of your feelings about student power, what do you feel about the situation now at Kent State?

Benoit: "I think they're entirely wrong."

T-N: You think the students are wrong?

Benoit: "Absolutely. They've got probably the same problem we do at Boise State. You run out of space. You need to put a building somewhere and you can't afford to go out and condemn some land, and if you need the building you've just got to build it. So, I'm in complete disagreement with the students at Kent State. Of course, all I know is what I've read in the papers . . . After all, students are kind of transient. They're there four years, two years, and a new group comes in."

T-N: What about women's roles in education as far as tenure, faculty rank, position? Do you think this is becoming more equal than it has been?

Benoit: "I think, in my opinion, they are equal in our institutions . . . I think we have pretty well equalized the pay of men and women in our institutions of higher learning. We had to make some adjustments in order to do so, but we did it. We think we are in compliance with Affirmative Action at all schools. For instance, right now the new faculty representative or head of faculty at the University of Idaho is a woman professor. She will be representing. The present faculty representative of Lewis-Clark State College is a woman professor. One of the student body presidents is a girl, right now."

T-N: What about the publish or perish syndrome?

Benoit: "No, I don't believe that. In the first place we know that research is important, and we try to allocate what money is available for research . . . But no, I don't think that concept involves Idaho."

T-N: Do you think the Superintendent of Public Instruction should be an elected official?

Benoit: "No, I think he should be appointed. I think the governor should appoint him. A state superintendent of public instruction . . . I just think it's not quite fair. In the first place it costs a lot of money to run for office. In the second place because they are an elected officer or constitutional officer there are salary limitations. They're underpaid. And, furthermore, I don't think that in a campaign you can really explain to the people all of the details and problems in running the State Department of Education. I feel the guy that's the most popular is going to be elected, it's a popularity contest. I don't think a professional man — these men are professionals — I don't think that they should have to have a popularity contest and spend the money to run for office.

T-N: Do you think the State Department of Education is getting too big?

Benoit: "People say that State Department of Education has got a lot of people in it, and it's true they do. I don't know what the percentage would be, but I would guess a large number of the employes of the State Department of Education in Boise are there to do nothing more than oversee the paperwork caused by the federal money.

"The federal government puts out regulations and forms by the tons, and if you don't comply with the regulations and complete the forms the way they want it, you run into problems getting the money. The state department has grown, but I attribute a great deal of that growth in personnel up there to requirements of having people that can take care of complying with federal regulations.

T-N: Do you think it's fair to high school graduates not getting seals to give special seals to students who pass the new skills test prior to graduation?

Benoit: "If the competency tests are what they say they are and do what they theoretically will do, no, I don't think it's unfair. I don't think it's all that big a deal whether you've got a seal on there or not.

T-N: How would you assess your other board members, would you be willing to do that publicly?

Benoit: They are eight completely different personalities, which I think is wonderful, because you wouldn't want a rubber-stamp board. Some of us have voted together on issues, and we've voted against each other on issues. But I'm convinced that every vote that's cast is cast by a person making his own independent honest decision of how he should vote, and I respect them. And, if I'm on the losing side, fine, we go to another issue.

"Those people are some of the closest friends that I've ever made in my life, and I think they're just about the most wonderful group of people I've ever worked with. There's not a one of them that I don't like and admire."

T-N: What's your feeling about the open meeting law?

Benoit: "I honestly think it's a good law to have an open meeting. I think sometimes it slows things up, but I think the open meeting law is fine. If you have open meetings they're not going to conjecture that you did this or you did that — if you do it right there in front of God and everybody, then an investigative newspaper reporter or nobody else can say there was something devious about it all.

T-N: One of the charges against the board is that there've been too many professional people, doctors, lawyers . . . Do you think that's true?

BENOIT: "I don't think a person's profession or avocation has anything to do with his qualifications to be a board member. I think the man himself is what determines whether he's a good board member . . . I don't think because a man's a physician or a lawyer he's different from anybody else on the board. I don't think background means a thing, and I assure you the medical profession doesn't dominate the board, I think that's an unfair statement . . . I've heard that statement before, but that's not right."

T-N: What about educational financing? Do you think we need to put more money into our schools? Do we need to college educate a larger percentage of our population?

Benoit: "No. I think that we're pretty well meeting the demand for higher education in Idaho. I think that almost any student that wants to is going to be able to attend some school, either a community college . . . I don't think we need more money to educate more students, because the campus population on all of them is fairly well stabilized. The need for more money would be to keep improving the quality of your programs and to meet inflation.

"I will say this, I honestly think, viewing our narrow tax base here in Idaho, I think that the legislature has been very good to education, I really do. Of course, we could always use more."

EDWARD L. BENOIT
... Four years on Idaho Board of Education

T-N: What do you think about tenure?

Benoit: "As I understand the concept of tenure, it arose back in the Senator McCarthy days, and the purpose of tenure was to protect academic freedom. In other words, some professor wouldn't be fired for saying something in general philosophical terms that say the government board or the president of the university or somebody didn't like. That was the purpose of tenure. Unfortunately, in a few small instances, and I think this is a very minority, it has enabled some professors to retain jobs which they shouldn't have. But I will say I think that's a very small minority, and I really — I'm very content with tenure."

T-N: Do you feel that it achieves its purpose?

Benoit: "Academic freedom? Yes, I do. ... Tenure is a very important personal achievement for a college professor, and I think any attempt to eliminate the tenure system would cause a lot of disruption, problems."

T-N: Do you think then that tenure should extend to the public school level?

Benoit: "Well, no. I would say it's in higher education, and it's entrenched there, but with the problems it does bring, I think it would be a mistake to start the tenure system in the public schools. If I had a choice to start in with a school, I don't think I would start with tenure . . . I think with the constitutional guarantees we're given and the court decisions regarding the right of freedom of speech and all, I think academic freedom is protected without tenure."

T-N: Looking back, how did your term on the board affect you?

Benoit: "Being on that state board of education has been the most rewarding experience I've had in my life. I wouldn't trade it for anything. To be able to know and to be educated about the problems of education — to be able to become good friends and understand these college professors and administrators and the members on the board, the great friendships you make. You know I think some of the best friends you make are those with whom you had a disagreement and still get along. They're some wonderful people in higher education in Idaho — dedicated. We've got a high class group of people running our education system."

T-N: Are you going to keep in touch with board members or follow what's happening on the board?

Benoit: "Socially, when I can I want to see any of them, but I don't intend to go to any board meetings at all. I think it would be inappropriate for me to go to board meetings. Mrs. Hymas is now on the board. The problems are hers, not mine . . . I will probably follow more closely developments in the newspapers, but I'm not going to become active in anything, like the local board. I've put in my time.

US liberationists seen as 'crazy'

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — The FALN which created havoc with bombs and bomb threats in New York City Wednesday may say that it's trying to liberate Puerto Rico from the Americans, but down on the island the organization is considered just a group of crazy New Yorkers.

The Armed Forces of National Liberation, or FALN by its Spanish initials, has never claimed responsibility for any major terrorist activities on the island itself and is not known to have any contacts or even admirers in Puerto Rico.

Authorities are convinced that the miniscule terrorist cell consists of "Newyoricans," meaning New Yorkers of Puerto Rican origin. Newyoricans are often not looked upon kindly in Puerto Rico when they return to take up residence or even just to visit.

Generally, a culture gap has developed. Many Newyoricans don't speak Spanish well any more but they may not yet have mastered English, either. Sometimes, they're misfits both here and there.

There are quite a few of them — of the five million Puerto Ricans, only three million live on the island and the remaining two million on the mainland, most of them in New York.

It is a bitter irony that most of the violence over the years in the name of Puerto Rican Independence has been committed on the American mainland by people who may never have been to Puerto Rico or had little contact with the island.

In recent years, New York has been the scene of much more Puerto Rican violence than the the island itself.

The two most spectacular acts of Puerto Rican nationalists — the 1950 assassination attempt on President Harry Truman and the 1954 attack on Congress in Washington — were both committed in the continental United States by New York residents of Puerto Rican origin.

Although the five persons responsible for those attacks, including one woman, Lolita Lebron, are still being held in American jails, their release is being demanded these days not only by their fellow terrorists.

Even Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo, who favors statehood for Puerto Rico, thinks they have been punished enough and should be pardoned.

Puerto Rico which was acquired by the United States from Spain after the Spanish-American war of 1898, has never in modern times been an independent country and in the great status debate which may be reaching a climax in the next few years the independence proposition is so far running a poor third.

Jury finds man guilty in transport of prostitutes

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Pat Rich, said to be the leading madam in the Midwest, and Lloyd Pelton of Granite City, Ill., were convicted Thursday of interstate transportation of prostitutes.

A U.S. District Court jury found Mrs. Rich, described by police as "Queen of the Chicago Call Girls," guilty Wednesday night on six of eight charges of procuring prostitutes and sending them to Nevada.

Thursday, the jury found Mrs. Rich, 50, guilty of conspiracy and found Pelton, 46, guilty of two counts of interstate transportation of prostitutes.

The all-male jury also found Pelton guilty of conspiracy.

Pelton testified in his own defense and denied the charges. He said he did not know what business Mrs. Rich was in but admitted to engaging in sex with some of the alleged prostitutes.

Two prostitutes were the key government witnesses in the case. Mrs. Rich was charged with transporting the women to a Chicago boat show last fall and to an alleged house of prostitution, Penny's Cozy Corner, in Winnemucca, Nev.

The two prostitutes testified they overheard Pelton call Nevada and arrange for them to go there.

Police get new detail on killer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police say more witnesses to the latest attack by the night stalking killer who calls himself "Son of Sam" have come forward, setting police artists to work on a new drawing of the gunman.

Police Commissioner Michael Codd said Thursday the new drawing would not substantially change the department's description of the killer who has fatally shot six persons and wounded seven others since last summer with a .44-caliber Bulldog revolver.

But, said Codd, "we want to be as accurate as possible."

Winner devours peppers

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A rickety window fan sucked a gentle breeze into the clapboard and plywood cafe just enough to dry the sweat on Hector Alvarado's face. He shifted positions in the folding metal chair and pointed to a large jar of dark green peppers sitting on a counter.

"That's about a hundred of them," Alvarado said. "A little bit over a gallon."

Alvarado owns Hector's Taco Flats, a delapidated Mexican food cafe which warns patrons: "Over 2,000 calls returned."

On Saturday the popular cafe and outdoor beer garden will host the "World's Fifth Jalapeno Eating Contest," a masochistic trial of intestinal fortitude.

The rules are simple. Whoever eats the most Jalapeno peppers in an hour is declared the winner, and "If you throw up, you're out of the contest."

For the uninitiated, the jalapeno is a plump, juicy chili pepper that stings the tongue like hundreds of wasps. In texture the dratgreen peppers range from crisp to soggy.

And they're hot enough to bring tears to the eyes of the toughest bully. Usually nothing but time can ease the pain.

For the fifth annual contest, Alvarado is inviting local reporters for a preliminary "celebrity contest," providing Iron Ice cream for contestants and selling special T-shirts touting the event.

Hostesses will carry plates of peppers to contestants who will sit behind a 40-foot table. Judges aided by the hostesses will monitor the pepper consumption.

"I would say the person that wants to win will have to eat more than two gallons of peppers," Alvarado said. He grinned. "A lot of people enter with the idea that maybe 19 or 20 peppers will win it, but they drop off after eating around 40 or 50."

This year's contest for the first time will feature the reigning champ, Brad Arndt, who ate 108 Jalapenos to win the crown last year.

Elder fires seven birdies to lead Hartford golf

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — Veteran Lee Elder, crediting a change in his putting stance, fired a seven birdie, seven-under par 64 Thursday to take the first-round lead of the $210,000 Greater Hartford Open.

The Dallas, Texas' native, whose last win came in Houston last year, blasted out of a bunker on the 18th hole and landed six inches from the crop for a par-four and the lead.

Elder, whose best finish this year was third in the Crosby Open, came in after a field of five players battled for the lead at 65 most of the day on the 6,583-yard course.

He credited his fine play with a recent change in his putting stance that his wife Rose helped him work out while golfing last week at Vail, Colo., with former President Ford.

"I'm hitting the ball awfully well the past two weeks," said Elder, who in 1974 became the first black to play in the Masters.

"I was cutting the ball and now I'm back to drawing the ball. Basically, it means closing my stance so I meet the ball square on," said the smiling nine-year veteran of the tour.

"My wife's a good golfer, she knows my game. She was the one who showed me after the first round in the Masters how to improve my putting."

Elder, whose lifetime winnings total $546,076, said, "I've been relaxed all week. It's a nice position to be in knowing the other fellows have to catch you."

Bunched at 65 after the first round were Curtis Strange, Tom Diehl, Jim Simons, Dick Mast, George Burns and Kermit Zarley.

One stroke behind at 66 were rookie Brady Miller, Bill Kratzert and Lee Trevino, who won the event in 1972.

A large group among the 156 players finished below par.

Rick Massengale, the defending GHO champ, was in a group of 11 who managed to finish at par.

"I putted very well," said Zarley, who birdied seven holes, "but I didn't do anything else outstanding."

The 36-year-old tour veteran, who has earned $29,086 this year and $552,231 lifetime, said he didn't plan to play after his disqualification in Philadelphia last week, "but my kids talked me into it."

Zarley said he wasn't bitter about the incident that occurred on the 17th hole in the first round.

"I picked up a player's club and a caddy later questioned an official about it. The rule has never been enforced and the regulation has been violated before. The players and caddies know it and it was never noticed before," Zarley said.

Mast, 26, fashioned his 65 with a back-nine performance of six birdies that overshadowed bogeys on the third and 17th holes. He shot four and five pars on the 12th and 16th holes respectively. He also birdied the first and seventh holes.

"I've made only three cuts in 18 tournaments. This is my best round," said the St. Petersburg, Fla., resident who lost his tour privileges in 1975 and won back his card last December.

Mast shot a 68 Wednesday and he gave much of the credit for his two low scores to his caddy and brother-in-law, Dean Wadsworth.

"We've made some adjustments in my play and they seem to be working good," he said.

Burns sweated out a cold to score his best round of the season. Five of his eight birdies came on the front nine where he also bogeyed a par-four eigth hole.

One other bogey occurred on the par-four 10th when his shot struck a tree and was picked up by a spectator.

"I went into the bunker on my third shot and had to blast it out," he said.

Burns has not won a tournament since he joined the tour in 1973, but he has done well financially collecting $88,400 this year mainly from second place finishes at Greensboro and the Kemper Open.

New Orleans winner Simons and Terry Diehl shot almost the same game over the muggy course. They each had two birdies going out and four on the back nine.

Diehl, who faded after winning the opening round at Philadelphia, quipped, "I'm shooting better than the last three rounds in Philadelphia."

He said he was "depressed and very tired last week, but I've got no excuses."

"I feel good about my game now. It's just a matter of keeping it together."

Kratzert said he was "a little tired. I played the last three weeks, but a 66 will perk you up a little bit."

Katzert first turned pro in 1974 and became frustrated and quit, but returned in 1975.

A bogey on the par-three 17th hole dropped Trevino back to third place but the jovial Mexican was happy with his six birdies, four of them coming on the front nine.

Like Elder, the former U.S., Canadian and British Open champion has gone back to old putting style "which I lost about three years ago."

"I don't know what I did when I was putting good because it was automatic, but it's mostly confidence," he said.

Trevino said he was recuperated from his serious back trouble which sidelined him for much of last year's tour.

Softball playoffs enter final three days action

TWIN FALLS — Eight men's teams and two women's teams remain undefeated going into this weekend's wrap-up of the district "A" softball tournament.

In women's action, tournament favorite Chemical Supply takes on Professional Pharmacy in a battle of the unbeatens Saturday at 8 p.m. on diamond 1.

In the loser's bracket, Mc and Ed's battles Grizzly Bear at 1 p.m. Saturday on diamond 2 and Computerized Farming faces Century Yamaha at the same time on diamond 2. The winners will face each other on diamond 1 Saturday at 4:45 p.m., and the winner of that one will face the Chemical Professional loser Sunday morning at 10:05 on diamond 2.

The championship game will be played at 2:15 Sunday on diamond 1, with an extra game set for 6:15 on diamond 1 if necessary.

In the men's division, the remaining undefeated teams will swing into action Saturday afternoon: Sierra Life the Clip takes on Wholesale Carpets on diamond 1 at 2:15 p.m. and Ace Hansen meets Budweiser at the same time on diamond 2. At 3:30, Cain's Northwest Plywood plays Farmer's Union on diamond 1 and Project Mutual goes against Coors on diamond 2.

In the loser's bracket, tonight Sewer and Water faces Dave's Music at 6:45; Pepsi vs. Tom's at 8; and Zamora vs. Scientific Landscaping at 9:15, all on diamond 1. On diamond 2, Twin Falls Realty meets Independent Meat at 6:45; Corner Bar plays Buhl Herald at 8; and Troy National Laundry meets Mountain Bell at 9:15.

On Saturday morning Elliott's plays Burley Beverage at 9 on diamond 1 and Moore Business Forms meets Farm Equipment at the same time on diamond 2.

The men's tournament will continue through Saturday and Sunday until the championship game at 5 p.m. Sunday on diamond 1.

Thursday night Coors defeated Moore Business Forms 11-6 and Olympia lost to Project Mutual 5-13 in men's games. In the only women's game, Century Yamaha blitzed Schlitz 18-1.

Struthers grabs golf title

TWIN FALLS—Margaret Struthers defeated Ruth Jenkins Thursday to win the championship flight in the Blue Lakes Country Club Women's Championships.

In the first flight, Betty Colner took top honors by beating Jenny Fish, and Edith McAtee placed third with a win over Janette Fallis.

Jan Jones took the third flight with a victory over Jenny Westergren, and Billye Brown outplayed JoAnn Rose to take third.

Girls' softball results

TWIN FALLS—Idaho First National Bank whipped Mike Gray's Realty 9-6 Thursday night to win the International League 8th and 9th grade slaughtersy tournament.

The tournament matched the top four finishers in the 4th through 9th grade girls' softball leagues. The first place team faced the third place team and the second met the fourth from each league, and the winners played for the tournament championship.

In the Atlantic League (7th grade), Brutches took the top slot by downing Miller Construction 5-2.

Valley edged Intermountain Gas 11-8 to win the Pacific League (6th grade); Benno's Jewelers ripped Donnelly's Sporting Goods 16-7 to win the National League (5th grade); and Ray Lewis Masonry squeaked by First Federal Savings and Loan 12-10 to win the American League (4th grade).

Civilian wins pistol title

CAMP PERRY, ohio-(UPI) — Hershel Anderson, Tracy City, Tenn., celebrated his 40th birthday Thursday by becoming the first civilian in 20 years to win the National Pistol Championship.

Anderson posted a three-day aggregate 2,651 points out of a possible 2,700 to edge out Army S. Sgt. Thomas Woods, Los Angeles, who had 2,657 points in the National Rifle Association event.

It was the third time Anderson captured the crown, winning in 1973 and 1974 when he was a member of Army Shooting team. The Army's Blue Team won the team championship. The highest scoring police officer was Lt. John Farley, Americus, Ga.

South African leads LPGA by 3

SUNNINGDALE, England (UPI) — South African Sally Little shot a six-under-par 68 Thursday to grab the halfway lead with an 11-under 137 in the $100,000 European LPGA Championship.

Judy Rankin, three shots back at 140 after a second round 71, was second ahead of overnight leader Debbie Austin, who shot a one-over 75 and Nancy Lopez with a three-under 71, who were both bracketed at 143.

Sandra Palmer, who was six-under half way round only to drop back to four-under, shared 144 with Pat Bradley.

Little, teeing off last with Chako Higuchi of Japan, had six birdies up to the par-5 16th, which she eagled after sending a huge two-iron second shot only three inches from the pin.

"I want to start playing tomorrow's round already," said Little, who was tied for second place with Rankin at 69 after the first round on the 6,174-yard par-74 course which has staged the tournament for the past four years.

"I hit so many greens and only played three bad shots in the whole round," said Little, 26. "The wind was swirling all over the place but I don't think I have played as good since the Bent Tree Classic."

Little, who has yet to win a tournament this year, birdied the 4th, 5th, 8th, 10th, 12th and 18th holes to sweep into the lead, dropping strokes only at the first and seventh.

Rankin picked up seven birdies, two of them in a late charge at the 17th and 18th. But she double bogeyed the 4th when she drove into a sandtrap, came out too strongly and three putted, then three putted the 14th to drop another stroke.

"I only had one bad shot but I had two or three good shots that got into bad places. I hit a bunker on the 16th fairway that I didn't even know was there," said Rankin.

Austin was one over for her second round despite picking up birdies at the first and second to go out in 34. Coming back she was out of touch with her putter, missed three birdie chances and collected three bogies.

Lopez came from Wednesday's round of 72 with a three-under score Thursday of 71, including five birdies, for a 143 total.

Canadian Sandra Post, four over after the opening round, equalled Little's 68 with two eagles and five birdies to go two-under at 146 and move up amongst the leaders.

Donna Young, who shot at 75 Wednesday, also came strong with an eagle at the par-4 9th and four birdies for a 71 to join Post on 146.

The cut was made at 160 and 62 players will compete in Friday's third round.

Connors romps to easy net win

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (UPI) — Defending champion Jimmy Connors breezed by unseeded Zan Guerry of Chatanooga, Tenn., in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2, Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the $125,000 Volvo International Tennis Tournament.

Connors, who has won this stop on the pro tour for the past two years and is top-seeded this year, will face fifth-seeded Harold Solomon Friday. Solomon, of Silver Spring, Md., ousted ninth-seeded Arthur Ashe of Miami, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 in Thursday's third round.

Connors, of Belleville, Ill., beat Solomon in straight sets in their only other meeting in the past year.

In other matches, fourth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain, recovering from a lingering arm injury, easily eliminated Brian Fairlie of New Zealand, 6-4, 6-0; second-seeded Brian Gottfried, of Bonaventure, Fla., ousted 10th-seeded Bob Lutz of San Clemente, Calif., 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

Eighth-seeded Ken Rosewall of Australia fought off Bernard Fritz of France, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4; sixth-seeded Eddie Dibbs of Miami beat Hank Pfister of Bakersfield, Calif., 7-5, 6-3; 12th-seeded John Alexander of Australia defeated unranked Greg Halder of Canada, 6-4, 6-3, and Steve Krulevitz of Baltimore beat Terry Moor of Monroe, La., 6-1, 6-7, 7-6.

Moor upset seventh-seeded Stan Smith of Sea Pines, S.C., Wednesday, while Halder had stunned third-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico in the opening round.

In other quarterfinal matches Friday, Gottfried will face Dibbs, Orantes takes on Rosewall and Alexander plays Krulevitz.

Clay court wizard

ARGENTINE southpaw Guillermo Vilas recorded his 25th straight victory on clay courts Thursday. Vilas' clay winning streak began at the French Open and lasted through the Austrian Open and two tournaments in the United States.

Vilas, Richards record lopsided net victories

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (UPI) — Guillermo Vilas, playing with ferocity after losing the first two games, opened his assault on the men's singles title at the $85,000 Mutual Benefit Life Open with an impressive victory — his 25th in a row on clay.

Vilas won 18 straight points midway through the first set, taking the heart out of opponent Colin Dibley with a fearsome ground stroke game 6-4, 6-1 in a first-round match that lasted 63 minutes.

In a co-feature played earlier on the stadium court at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club, Dr. Renee Richards of Newport Beach, Calif. gained the semifinals of the women's competition with a 6-4, 6-1 triumph over Paula Smith of Los Angeles.

Zeljko Franulovic of Yugoslavia and Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif., the sixth and eighth-seeded players, respectively, also advanced with straight-set successes.

Franulovic ousted Onny Parun of New Zealand 6-4, 7-6 in a second-round match. There were four service breaks in the second set and Franulovic won the tie-breaker game 8-6. Borowiak was making his first tournament start and turned back the challenge of Australian Cliff Letcher 6-4, 6-4.

Vilas, who won the French Open, the Austrian Open and two victories in the U.S. at Washington and Louisville for four consecutive clay court triumphs, admitted that he was "a little afraid" before his New Jersey debut.

"You always have to worry about the first match of a tournament," said the Argentine southpaw. "Dibley also happens to be a tough opponent."

The Australian, with the famed power serve, won the first game and broke Vilas in the second. The third game was crucial as Vilas broke back at love with the help of two doublefaults.

"I started to gain confidence in that third game when Colin doublefaulted twice," said Vilas.

Vilas pressured Dibley with his high kicking topspin ground strokes. The Aussie could not respond and found himself pinned to the baseline.

"He's just too tough to penetrate," Dibley said. "The ball keeps flying back to you at shoulder height and you can't make any approach shots. He plays with such confidence that you can only hope for a letdown."

Vilas goes after No. 26 on clay Friday in a second-round match against Pete Fleming of Chatham, N.J. That match follows a semifinal encounter between Mary Carillo of Eouglaston, N.Y., the top-seeded women's entry, and Dr. Richards, in their only prevous meeting. Carillo beat the 42-year-old transsexual.

English player Lindsay Beaven, who now lives in Port Washington, N.Y., came from behind for a 4-6, 6-3, 6-1 victory over 15-year-old Kelly Henry of Glendale, Calif. and moved into the finals of the women's play. Henry upset Rayni Fox of North Miami Beach, Fla. in the quarter-finals Wednesday.

White Sox snap losing streak

CHICAGO (UPI) — A passed ball by catcher Jim Sundberg permitted Eric Soderholm to score from third base in the sixth inning with what proved to be the winning run Thursday night and enabled the Chicago White Sox to defeat the Texas Rangers, 5-4, and snap a four-game losing streak.

The triumph boosted the White Sox' lead in the American League West to 3½ games over the Minnesota Twins. Texas, which had won five in a row, dropped to 5½ games behind the White Sox.

Red Sox bop Vida, A's 3-1

OAKLAND (UPI) — Ferguson Jenkins, without a victory since June 23, went the distance on a three-hitter Thursday night in pitching the frontrunning Boston Red Sox to a 3-1 triumph over the Oakland A's.

The victory enabled the Red Sox to take a half game lead over idle Baltimore and a three-game edge over New York, which also did not play, in the American League East race.

Tiger rookie wins 11th game

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Rusty Staub drove in two runs with an infield out and a home run Thursday night to back the six-hit pitching of Dave Rozema and lead the Detroit Tigers to a 4-2 triumph over Minnesota which snapped the Twins' four-game winning streak.

Rozema, a leading candidate for American League Rookie of the Year honors, walked four and struck out two in raising his record to 11-4 and recording his fourth straight triumph and fifth complete game.

Hunt permits drawn

BOISE—Idahoans who applied for a controlled hunt permit should check their mailboxes now to see whether they have drawn one of the 9,635 permits approved for 1977.

The Department of Fish and Game reports billing notices for those who drew permits were mailed out shortly after the Monday (August 1) computer drawing.

Claude Clapsaddle, data processing supervisor, called this year's drawing "very smooth." Sifting the 9,635 permit holders from 89,104 applications took about 35 minutes, he said.

Clapsaddle said those persons drawing more than one permit this year were about five per cent, and no one drew more than three permits. He said 14,157 persons applied for three or more permits (the limit is six), but only 22 persons drew three permits.

He said 26,055 persons submitted between two and six applications, but 484 actually drew two permits.

Since the $1 application fee was dropped this year, persons who draw permits will have to pay for the permit itself according to the following schedule:

Residents: Deer, $3; elk, $5; moose, $55 (includes tag); antelope, $15 (includes tag); bighorn sheep, $55 (includes tag); and mountain goat, $25 (includes tag).

Nonresidents: Deer, $3; elk, $5; antelope, $25 (includes tag); bighorn sheep, $110 (includes tag); and mountain goat, $45 (includes tag).

Sutter disabled

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Cubs' reliever Bruce Sutter is taking his 1.06 earned run average and his 24 saves to the disabled list for 21 days, the team announced Thursday.

He might also be taking with him the club's hopes for a pennant.

Team physician Jacob Suker said Sutter was placed on the disabled list after being examined by another doctor at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Sutter strained a muscle near his right armpit earlier in the season and was out for about 10 days. He tried to make a comeback but apparently restrained the muscle.

The Cubs have led the National League Eastern Division for more than two months. But the lead, once substantial, has dwindled to one game over Philadelphia. Pittsburgh and St. Louis are close behind.

Oilers waive Culp

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (UPI) — At his own request, all-pro middle guard Curley Culp has been placed on waivers so that the Houston Oilers can determine which NFL teams are interested in trading for him.

At least six undisclosed teams claimed Culp, it was learned Thursday night. The Oilers are expected to take Culp off waivers within 24 hours and begin trade negotiations.

Culp, a nine-year veteran, said failure to resolve old problems with the club caused him to seek a move.

Fishing hints: by Swen

Reaching the "Hell point"

Carl Couch, Twin Falls let me know this past week that if the resident fishing licenses raised from $6 to $10, they had reached the "To hell with it" point. He says he only fishes about 2 or three times a year so why pay $10 for this?

Billingsley creek in Hagerman valley is hot. While much of this creek if flyfishing only there is one stretch just behind the town of Hagerman that is owned by the Fish and Game department. I fished this stretch of water twice last week . . . and it was excellent.

During the middle of the day I fished it with bait. I used a small Colorado spinner with a snelled No. 6 hook behind. I used a piece of nightcrawler on the hook and caught many in the 10 to 15 inch size.

Later one evening I fly fished this same water and found that the fish would take any fly that you could get on the water.

One problem: The bank growth is so bad that you will have to force your way along the bank. It makes it miserable for fly fishermen also. Many of your back casts catch on the dense growth.

I tried using a barrel roll and this worked much better than the re-cast you normally would use. Hip boots are a must. Also shuffle along. Some muskrat holes are 20 feet deep and you for the teeth right out of your mouth when you fall into one of them.

Yup! The bugs were out in full force late in the evening also. But it is worth it. This stream should contain some nice Browns. They were planted a few years ago, and last year I caught 1 in the 3 pound class.

Mother will cuss you if you take her there!

Aussie boats romp

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Australia's two rival yachts Thursday took an impressive lead with back-to-back wins over France and Sweden in the opening of trials to pick an America's Cup challenger.

Land developer Alan Bond's boat Australia, from Perth, and veteran Aussie entry Gretel II each defeated Sweden's first Cup competitor Sverige and pen tycoon Marcel Bich's France I in 12-mile races off Newport.

In the morning series of races, Australia was 4 minutes behind Sverige at the start but took the lead before the first leg and won by 2:18 at the sixth and final mark.

In a race started 10 minutes later, Gretel II, floated by the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron, beat France I by 2:28 after taking the lead on the fifth leg.

Drags cancelled

POCATELLO — The drag races scheduled for the Intermountain Raceway this Saturday have been cancelled due to a malfunction in the electronic equipment.

The next event at the track will be the Idaho State Sportsman Championship Race Aug. 27.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, AUG. 6, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Neither the day nor evening are good for taking any chances where your money or possessions are concerned. If you want a good time, you would be wise to seek inexpensive pleasures.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Discuss an important business venture with financial experts and get good advice. Stay within your budget.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study your appearance and take steps to improve it so you are more attractive to others. Be careful in motion today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day to show others that you are very efficient in your duties. Try to please family members and friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) In your desire for a good time be sure it is not too expensive. Strive to have increased harmony in the home.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take steps to make sure your credit is safeguarded. Diplomacy with everyone can bring advancement at this time. Express happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good day for getting the information you need for a new project you have in mind. You can now solve a puzzling problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time to handle responsibilities that are difficult to do during busy work week. Come to a better understanding with mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you don't agree on a topic with a friend, keep silent and all works out fine later. Find the right way to have more prestige.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Check on your surroundings and make needed repairs to property. More thought for family members is wise at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be sure not to spend too much money for recreation or you could regret it later on. Avoid one who could be a troublemaker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't commit yourself to work that is harder than you can comfortably stand. Use extra care in motion today.

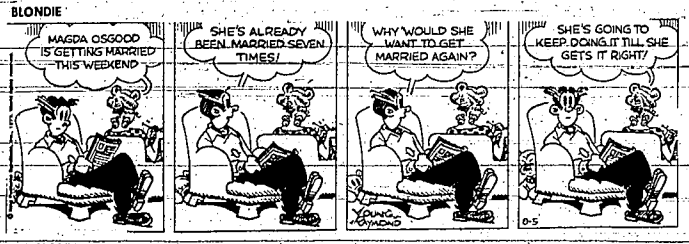

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan time to handle travels, matters well and communicate with other intelligently. Don't neglect regular routines.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to solve all kinds of problems easily and should have the education directed along financial and business lines for best results. Give good spiritual training so that your progeny will not be entirely materialistic.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

So you want to live to be 100, do you? The surveytakers checked 1,500 men and women who've done so to find out what they recommend: 1. Leave home early and start making your own way. 2. Work for yourself rather than for somebody else, when possible. 3. Don't get all knotted up about security; just manage things as they come. 4. Get married. And again, if necessary. And again. 5. Have plenty of children. Predictably enough, there seems to be a kind of never-give-up attitude common to all these people, say the researchers. They insist on being in charge.

SOUTH PACIFIC

Q. "Whereabouts in which ocean is the world's most distant point from any land?"

A. A place in the South Pacific that's approximately 1,660 miles from Pitcairn Island, Ducie Island and Cape Bart. Consider the circle of water around it in which there's no surface land at all, about 8,657,000 square miles. That sheet of brine is bigger than any one country, even the Soviet Union.

Q. "Do women ever commit suicide by hanging themselves?"

A. That's rare. Very rare. When it happens, though, the woman uses a belt or strap from her own clothing, virtually never a rope. Or so the police records indicate.

Q. "How long would you have to jog or walk to burn up 140 calories in a dry martini?"

A. Jog, about 14 minutes. Walk, about 27 minutes.

Q. "What proportion of the full-term babies are born head first?"

A. 96 per cent.

GUN MURDERS

Total population of England, West Germany and Japan combined is some few millions larger than the population of the United States. Yet gun murders in this country annually out-number the gun murders in all those nations put together by at least 50 to one.

Scholars at Northwestern University contend their studies prove that men change their minds from two to three times as often as do women.

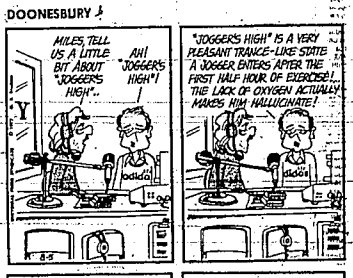

According to the stargazers, Capricorns tend to be fairly courageous types with a steadfastness of purpose.

Only half the soap-opera watchers are grown women, it's claimed.

It was Cornelia Otis Skinner who said, "Woman's virtue is man's greatest invention."

Markets

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher Friday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which jumped 2.17 points Thursday, was ahead 0.69 to 888.86 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines, 178 to 68, among the 386 issues crossing the tape.

Turnover amounted to about 460,000 shares.

Early Friday, the Labor Department reported unemployment fell to 6.9 per cent in July from 7.1 per cent in June. Analysts said the report could help the market.

Investors were somewhat encouraged by the Federal Reserve Board's report late Thursday that the nation's basic money supply fell $1.5 billion in the latest reporting week.

Late buying Thursday was sparked by Sears, Roebuck's report of a 21.7 per cent July sales rise, its best month in 20 years. The Commerce Department said the trend was continuing, with retail sales rising 2.4 per cent last week.

Called back

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Delmonico Foods Division of San Georgio Macaroni, Inc., is recalling an estimated 17 cases of Delmonico elbow macaroni in two-pound boxes because of salmonella contamination.

The company is recalling all boxes, with the code 1527 embossed on the carton and stamped on the case.

Moscow matches Detroit in announcing new auto

MOSCOW (UPI) — With all the flare of a Madison Avenue ad blitz, the Soviet Union has announced production of a new "well-designed, dynamic" automobile complete with stereo tape player and automatic transmission.

The Tass news agency reports the new snappy "Gaz-14" will romp to 100 kilometers (62 miles) in 15 seconds, driven by an eight-cylinder, 220 horse power engine.

It will have a top speed of 108 miles per hour.

But, Tass assures, "the noise of the powerful engine does not annoy the passengers."

The Gaz-14, which will go into production this year, is an updated version of the Chaika — a hulking, black automobile outfitted with fins reminiscent of Detroit in the late 50s.

The new model, however, is sleek and simple — remarkably like the latest Cadillacs and Buicks.

It sports double headlights, a subdued grill, low body lines and a streamlined, slanted rear-window.

Tass said the Gaz-14 has "three rows of seats for seven passengers."

"It is very comfortable inside the car," Tass said, and "answers all modern requirements."

The new model will also include air conditioning, a luxury item now found only in the Zil, which zips top Kremlin officials around Moscow.

The announcement did not say how much the car will cost or whether it will be available to the public.

The Chaika-13, the forerunner of the new model, was used only for official occasions — and can be seen roaring along the special reserved lanes in the center of Moscow's main boulevards.

The hottest item for Moscow residents — who often must wait years for a new car — is the compact Zhiguli.

The Zhiguli has become a status symbol among Moscovites, as well as a target for vandals who strip such hard-to-get replacement items as windshield wipers and mirrors.

Coke sets records

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Coca-Cola Co. reported Wednesday record sales and profits for the second quarter and first half of 1977.

Coke's net profit for the second quarter was $95.9 million, or 79 cents a share, compared with $85.4 million, or 70 cents a share, for the same period last year.

Net profit for the first six months of 1977 was $161.6 million, or $1.32 cents, compared with $144.4 million, or $1.18 a share, for the same period of 1976.

Second quarter net sales totaled $945.3 million, an 11.5 per cent increase over 1976's second quarter total of $847.7 million. Net sales for the first half of the year reached $1.730 billion, a 14.8 per cent increase over the $1.608 billion for the corresponding period of 1976.

Board chairman J. Paul Austin said the dollar sales increases resulted from higher unit sales of soft drinks and sharply higher prices in the company's tea and coffee operations.

Austin said soft drink sales climbed sharply in the United States, Latin America, Africa and the Far East. Sales in Europe increased "only moderately," following very strong gains a year ago due to the hot summer.

Coke also announced its support of bills before Congress to lift the ban on saccharin "to allow for a thorough review and evaluation of all scientific evidence."

Rhodesian efforts too late

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tanzania's President Julius Nyere said today there can be no peaceful transition to black majority rule in Rhodesia because fighting already is under way and it is now a matter of "whether we can shorten the war."

Nyerere, beginning his second day of meetings with President Carter, said he feels encouraged and hopeful the United States will put pressure on white-ruled Rhodesia to make the transition.

"I want American power to be put on the side of the liberation struggle in southern Africa," Nyerere said. "I feel there is a willingness by this administration to put at least part of that pressure on the side of the liberation struggle.

"I have never believed that Smith can be argued into accepting majority rule. Smith has to be forced into it," he said. "We will fight to the end ... we can defeat Smith and his friends without the assistance of the western world."

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Last week I returned from caring for my ailing mother for the last five weeks. She has a terminal illness and lives 300 miles from here.

Yesterday a friend of mine called on me and I am still in shock. She begged me to give my husband a divorce! It seems they saw a lot of each other while I was out of town. She said they were "in love," and he claimed I won't give him a divorce. She said my husband said we were "separated" and I had left him!

We've been married for 17 years and there never was any mention of divorce. In fact, I thought we had a good marriage. I am stunned, hurt and dizzy trying to figure this out.

Can you help me?

STILL IN SHOCK

Friend wants her husband

DEAR STILL: What's to figure out? Tell your husband about your visitor, and let HIM explain it to you.

DEAR ABBY: I have a rather delicate problem. My husband comes from a large family, and I get along very well with all of them, but naturally I like some of his sisters and brothers better than others. My question: When I entertain, isn't it O.K. for me to invite, say, a few of my husband's sisters and brothers, and leave out some?

I was called on the carpet by my husband's grandmother who said if I couldn't invite ALL of the brothers and sisters, I shouldn't invite any of them. Abby, that would make 18 people every time. I don't expect to be invited every place MY sisters and brothers are. I'd like to add that I invite the whole tribe occasionally, so it's not like I'm snubbing anyone.

BIG FAMILY

DEAR BIG: I don't know who is calling the signals in your family, but she's out of bounds. If you "invite the whole tribe occasionally," no one should feel offended. Invite whom you wish.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. I am a 66-year-old woman who is engaged to a 69-year-old man. He has been a widower for 11 years. He has asked me to go with him to visit his family. It would be a 900-mile trip by automobile.

My children feel that it would be "proper" for me to go with him if we flew, but "improper" if we drove. I have known this gentleman since childhood and see nothing "improper" about making the trip with him regardless of how we went. Will you kindly advise me, Abby.

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: I see nothing "improper" here, except possibly that which exists in the minds of your children. Go along with your fiance and have a wonderful time.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a person who is constantly correcting others in public about the pronunciation of words and their use? All involved in this situation are adults.

Thank you,

CRITICIZED

DEAR CRITIZED: The constant corrector is showing his ignorance. It is infinitely more important to be KIND than to be correct.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

My son has been diabetic for 15 years, beginning at age 27. There is no family history of diabetes and he has never been overweight. He takes a daily injection of insulin.

In the early years of his diabetes, he occasionally suffered insulin shock. In later years, this has happened only infrequently.

At time, such as at parties or when with friends, he drinks freely of alcoholic beverages, but never to the point of being intoxicated. He says that the consumption of alcoholic beverages is not harmful to his diabetic condition.

He exercises regularly by jogging, riding a bicycle, playing basketball and other vigorous activities. He is in good physical condition, but recently has mentioned that he occasionally feels numbness in his extremities.

My wife and I are concerned about his frequent use of alcoholic beverages. We think that it may cause some complications or worsen his diabetic condition. We would like your opinion on this matter.

Dear Reader—

In my opinion alcohol and diabetes do not mix. Alcohol affects the way the liver controls blood sugar. A person who has had too much alcohol often has a low blood sugar as a consequence of this action. Obviously then a person taking a regulated amount of insulin may have some changes in insulin requirements when he uses alcohol.

A diabetic taking insulin must regulate his life. That includes food habits, drinking habits and exercise habits. The amount of insulin required depends upon these habits as well as periods of psychic stress or any infectious illness.

In addition, a diabetic may develop disease of the liver. Any major use of alcohol speeds up some of the complications of diabetes. I do not know what your son means by having numbness in his extremities but diabetes will affect the nerves to the legs and sometimes other parts of the body. The best protection against nerve damage of this type is a well-regulated control of the blood sugar level. This will not always prevent the complications but most specialists agree that it helps.

All things considered I would be inclined to discourage your son from using alcohol—particularly in anything more than a one-drink occasional social affair. I think he may also profit from seeing his doctor about the "numbness in his extremities."

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention and Management. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

I had a test for diabetes and they said I was on the border line. Does that mean that I am in danger of becoming diabetic?

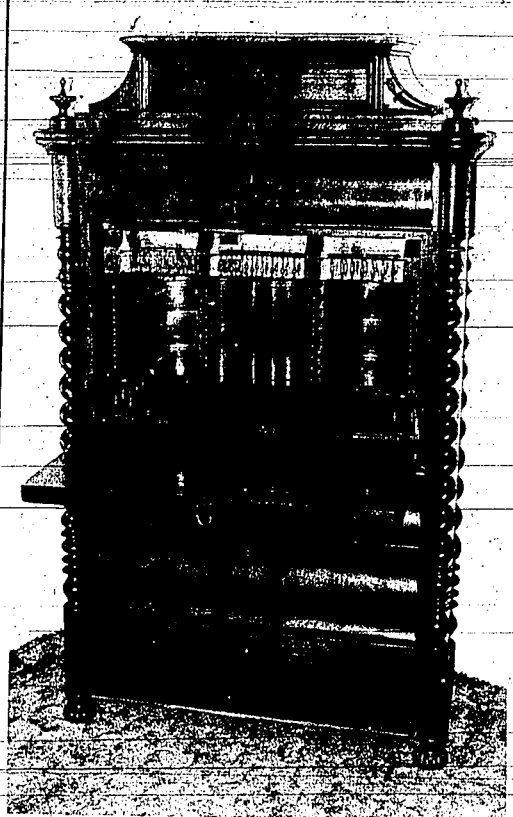

Should I go on a diet or take medication for it? At present I am doing neither. I am 75 years old and very active for my age.

Dear Reader—

The terminology regarding diabetes varies but about the most you can conclude from that report is that the laboratory studies failed to show that you have diabetes. In that case you can pretty much disregard it. The only recommendation I would make to you would be to eliminate any excess body fat that you might have and stay on the lean side. You will stay in better health and stay active if you do that anyway.

Woman receives valuable antique

MRS. GEORGE WILKENING RECEIVED VALUABLE GIFT
. . . antique English desk, more than 150 years old

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Mrs. George Wilkening recently received a gift which turned out to be a valuable antique more than 150 years old.

Ordinarily such an antique would be handed down to heirs within a family, but Mrs. Wilkening says the antique mahogany English desk given to her had belonged to a family without heirs.

Since she received the desk and secured expert help in having it restored, she has been offered as much as $1,000 for the fine piece of furniture, probably built in England in 1820.

"It's priceless," according to Clyde McBride, who restored the desk by rebuilding parts of the interior framework and putting it back together. "You could hunt a lifetime and not find one like it."

When the writing table is closed, the desk looks like a massive bureau, with hand-carved curving pillars on either side. The drawers above and below the fold-out desk table are beautifully finished mahogany, curved to reveal the beauty of the wood grain.

"It's a solid piece without becoming heavy or massive looking," Mrs. Wilkening says. The desk can easily be moved by one person because of its balance and design.

Once the desk is opened, more letter drawers and delicate woodwork are revealed, some of which McBride hired local woodworker Joe Boyd to rebuild. Boyd whittled tiny pieces of wood to replace lost ornaments adorning a framework in front of three mirrors.

"It might have been made for an individual," Mrs. Wilkening guesses.

The story of how the desk came to this country has been lost forever, but Mrs. Wilkening says two maiden sisters bought it in an antique store sometime prior to World War I in Chicago.

The two young women who operated a book store kept the old desk in their apartment in the posh suburb of Park Ridge until the time they decided to move to Hollywood to start another bookstore.

During the Depression, money was scarce and they didn't know if they could afford to move the fine old piece of furniture.

They almost sold it and left it behind.

Fortunately, a sister-in-law, recognizing the value of the desk after appraisal by the curator of a Chicago museum, paid for moving it to Hollywood.

Finally, the antique piece ended up in Twin Falls where it was given to Mrs. Wilkening because no other members of the family were left to inherit it.

Efforts to place the maker of the desk and its exact age have been stymied, but a picture in one of the drawers says "made in 1820."

"You can't buy anything like it," McBride, himself a collector of fine old furniture, says. "A friend of mine who was in England for five years said she never saw anything like it over there.

Restoring the desk without ruining its value was a difficult task, according to McBride. It wasn't a matter of simply sanding it off and refinishing it.

"It's got a bee's wax varnish on it," McBride says. "That's all they had in those days and it helps to prove its authenticity."

"That finish is something you can't replace," he adds.

McBride says the desk had not been treated well in recent years and was "in three pieces." He had to put it back together, fill cracks and still keep the original finely polished finish intact.

McBride himself would love to buy the desk. He says he would "start at $1,000" if he were to bid on it.

"There's no way to put a price on it," he says. "It's like bootleg whiskey, the drunker they get the higher they'll pay."

How did Frampton climb to the top?

By LESTER BANGS
© Chicago Daily News

"Suddenly a sprightly figure draped in gold satin bounds into view like a cheerleader from Tiffany's. After a breathless remark about 'itching to get back,' Frampton opens with an acoustic 'All I Want to Be (Is By Your Side),' eliciting mass squeals with the phrase . . . 'Run Me Over.' Three 'Comes Alive' solos later, Peter croons 'I'm In You' to deafening shrieks of soft-core desire.

"The 120-pound guitarist is promptly escorted offstage past a gaggle of girls, who press the barbed-wire fence and cry, 'You're beautiful,' 'You little faggot,' and 'Peter, you're a doll.' A million fans this summer means never having to say you're sorry."

Peter Frampton is white. I don't just mean the opposite of H. Rap Brown, but white on white's terms, like Wonder Bread, which is exactly what he is. The great question, the one all the rock pundits ponder as Frampton plays a 44-date tour is, "Why?"

An answer to The Peter Question: The Farrah Principle. Peter is pretty enough to have been nicknamed "The Face." And besides his poster-boy looks, Frampton, like Farrah, embodies another axiom: The Peter Principle. The lowest common denominator is promoted to the top, and you and I buy it as some kind of palliative. Something that reduces the violence of a disease. Something that covers by excuses and apologies. That moderates the intensity of boredom.

"Frampton Comes Alive" and "I'm In You" make 15-plus million of us feel a little better in the midst of our harrowing confusion.

But even though he's been chosen to play singing, dancing, guitar-playing, girl-saving happy Billy Shears in the movie version of "Sgt. Pepper," Peter Frampton is evil. You ask how Wonder Bread can possibly be evil. I will answer that all palliatives are inherently evil. They prevent us from confronting the choice of whether we want to spend our time and money on movies like "Orca The Killer Whale" magazines like "People" or frothy lightweight music like Peter Frampton's.

The nature of a palliative is that it makes the mind think that the disease doesn't exist even as the mind rots. Why do you think so many of Peter Frampton's songs have titles like "You Don't Have to Worry"? It's because Frampton offers his audience a security blanket, some false and entirely vacuous consolation to keep them, at least temporarily, from realizing that they are totally desperate.

In rock terms, Peter Frampton is the ironically logical culmination of the pervasive theme of terrified retreat that the Stones began with "Gimmie Shelter" — except that "Gimmie Shelter" posed that there WAS a storm rumbling, a world of terror and danger that we must deal with or sink.

Peter Frampton, who says that he can't go out on the street anymore, who lives in retreats at Woodstock and in the Bahamas, is popular precisely because he says that the storm does not exist. That the world is not awesome and monstrous. That there is no reason to avoid sinking into the womb, where Peter strokes his fans ever so lightly like a little old lady with a lapdog.

Like disco music and the subculture it has engendered, like the Swinging Singles industry, like most of the movies being released this summer, Peter Frampton is bread and circuses. And I hope we agree that bread and circuses are evil.

Peter Frampton is so bland I can't even work up any vitriol over him. Right now I'm listening to "You Don't Have to Worry" off his new album. While it is true that, like Al Stewart's "Year of the Cat" or Marilyn McCoo and Billy Davis' "You Don't Have to Be a Star (To Be In My Show)" or a lot of the other music coming out these days, it is almost ethereal, that if it was any blander it could not possibly exist on the face of the earth. Still, you can hardly say the guy's offensive.

So why not leave alone a bunch of people who are obviously satisfied with the product they're buying? At least Peter Frampton doesn't POUND on you like Disco or fry your nerves like those synthesized "jazz-rock" nightmares. Sure he's Muzak, but there has always been a place for Muzak, and there always will be.

Peter Frampton is one of the least obnoxious, least arrogant superstars going, which is certainly refreshing and no small component of his appeal. He's a nice guy, who makes nice music. He is not out to corrupt or exploit or promote a decadent life-style, so who cares if he's Wonder Bread? Not everybody has to be some kind of preening maniac.

I'm diseased, you're diseased . . . everybody has his own little palliative. Even the psychoanalytic establishment is beginning to admit that chemotherapy is about the best they can come up with. Millions and millions of people stave off the seizure with Peter Frampton equal or greater millions take Valium for the same purpose. I belong to the latter group, so I have no need for Frampton, but I empathize with those who do. And I have the most profound respect for the man himself. It must be a heavy responsibility to be a human palliative.

Area artist shows prints

SUN VALLEY — A nationally-known resident of the Wood River Valley, artist Don "Bemco" Bennett, has just completed a project on which he has worked intermittently for several years — the publication of a series of wildflower prints.

The limited edition prints, reproduced from his original watercolors, will be offered as a portfolio of signed and numbered prints entitled "Mountain Wildflowers," and will be shown publicly for the first-time at the Sun Valley Arts and Crafts Festival today, Saturday and Sunday.

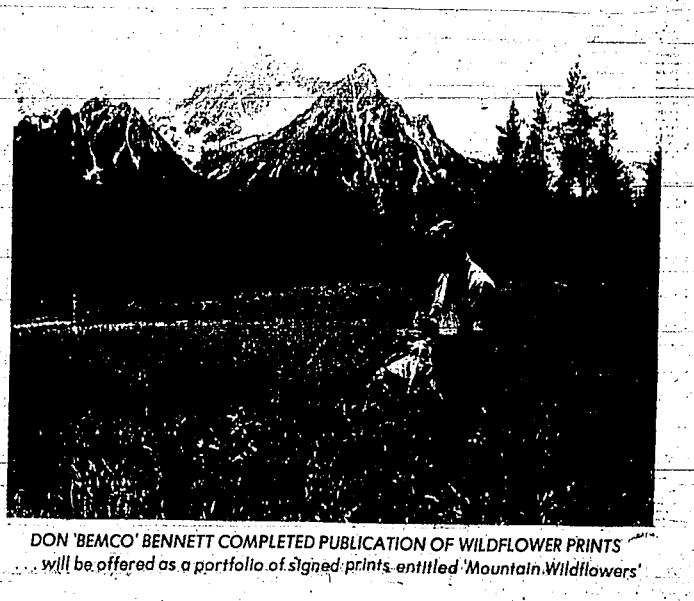

The suite of four 16 by 20 prints are of eight different wildflowers, all native to the Sawtooth mountains: Indian paintbrush and heartleaf arnica, camas and shooting star, daisies and elephantella and scarlet gilia and sego lilies.

The two flowers in each painting were selected not only for their color and compositional possibilities, but also because of their relationship environmentally: the two species blooming at the same time of year in the same environment, at the same approximate elevation.

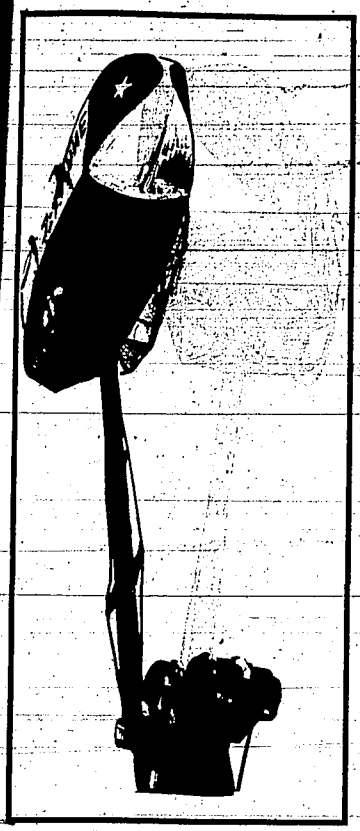

The artist's lifelong interest in wildflowers and his voluminous notes accumulated over the years were invaluable in doing the series.

Bennett, a native Idahoan, studied fine arts at the University of Washington, furthered his studies in painting and drawing in California, and returned to Idaho in 1954, selecting the Sawtooth mountain area as ideal from the standpoint of subject matter. He has maintained a studio in Ketchum and exhibited summer and winter in Sun Valley Lodge for over 20 years.

In the years that he has been painting professionally, Bennett has won an impressive number of regional and national awards, and has exhibited widely across the United States and abroad.

Erkins seeks GOP chair

BLISS — Bob Erkins, Bliss, former fish hatchery owner, is one of two men seeking the chairmanship of the Idaho Republican Party.

The new state chairman will be elected by the GOP state central committee Sept. 17 in Boise. The post is being vacated by Vernon Ravenscroft, Tuttle, who has said he probably will run against Rep. George Hansen, for Idaho's Second District congressional seat.

The other candidate for the top party post is Dennis Olsen, Idaho Falls attorney.

Erkins is former owner of Thousand Springs Trout Farm north of Buhl. He now operates the White Arrow ranch north of Bliss where he grows tomatoes and tropical plants, using geothermal heat.

A long-time active party worker, he has served as precinct worker, registrar, state finance chairman. Currently Erkins is chairman of the Region 5 GOP organization.

Cattle organizations meet

JEROME — Magic Valley Cattlemen's Association members and Desert Gold CowBelles will hold an annual picnic Aug. 13 at 7 p.m. at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

The picnic is the major social event for the cattle organizations. Roast beef, beans and beverages will be furnished. Those attending are asked to bring their own table service and salad or cake.

Members and friends are invited to attend. Special entertainment is planned.

Vandals ruin mailboxes

TWIN FALLS — Vandals went on a mailbox destroying spree over the past weekend and early this week, Sheriff Paul Corder said.

Investigation is underway by the sheriff's office in Buhl, Filer and Twin Falls areas where some 32 mailboxes and Times-News boxes have been destroyed or damaged.

Deputy Sheriff Harold Jensen said it appeared someone had used a truck or pickup to drive into the mailboxes, breaking the posts and other types of supports. He said most of the mailboxes themselves were not damaged, but posts and the plastic Times-News containers were broken.

In some areas, he said, a row of up to seven units, located in a single area, were wiped out.

Corder said the damage was brought to the attention of his department when rural mail carriers began reporting broken mailboxes on several routes. Most of the damaged mailboxes and newspaper containers are in the Buhl area, he said.

Two juveniles have been questioned in connection with the damage, and will probably be petitioned into Magistrate Court in connection with the case. Investigation is continuing.

City plays no favorites

GOODING — The city of Gooding apparently has a policy of no favoritism of which any municipality can be proud.

Even the city water superintendent, a 17-year city employe, has been unable to persuade any previous administration, or the current one, to oil the street in front of his home at 515 12th Ave. W.

Such disregard for a faithful employe came to light at the council meeting Monday night when the other sole resident on the block, Frank Chambers, came to ask the council why his street could not be surfaced.

Chambers, who lives at 509 12th Ave. W., has only been there two years, but McLeod quickly substantiated Chambers' complaint about the dust.

"He has it worse than we do," McLeod said, "because all the dust from the cars going in and out of our place since my wife babysits blows his way."

Councilman Bob Bolton, in charge of streets, said that it was too late to do anything this year but urged Chambers and McLeod to bring up the subject when the new city budget is being compiled.

Alien bill may lessen laborers

MAGIC VALLEY — President Carter's proposal to give legal status to millions of illegal aliens and allow them to remain in the U.S. to work may eventually cause a shortage of farm workers in Idaho.

"At first there should be a tremendous labor pool available," according to Harry Rhodes, supervisory investigator for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Boise.

"But once they get legal status, I don't know if they will want to continue in the harder jobs that we don't seem to have workers available to do," Rhodes predicts.

Carter's seven-page message to Congress outlined a proposal to expand the U.S. Border Patrol "substantially" to prevent illegal immigration across the U.S.-Mexican border.

His proposal also included a provision for granting permanent resident alien status to any illegal alien who has lived in this country since Jan. 1, 1970. After five years, the resident aliens could apply for U.S. citizenship.

Carter's proposal would also grant a five-year work permit to undocumented aliens who have lived in this country since prior to Jan. 1, 1977. Those aliens with work permits could not bring their families with them to this country.

Undocumented aliens who have entered the country this year would still be subject to deportation by the Border Patrol under the proposal.

In addition, if the proposal goes through Congress, alien control activity would be increased in areas such as southern Idaho where illegal aliens are known to be employed in large numbers.

The proposal provides for more strict enforcement of the Fair Labor Standards act and the Federal Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act.

"If they started enforcing those things accurately, it would have a big impact on farm labor in this area," according to James Stenger, agent in charge for the Border Patrol office in Twin Falls.

"We only have one registered labor contractor in this area," Stenger says. "We have a whole bunch of these moonlighting crews, but they're not registered with the Department of Labor."—

He says a good share of the contractors who provide laborers for beet work and other farm labor in this area are operating outside the law, but enforcement of the law has been lax in the past.

Stenger agrees that southern Idaho farmers may be looking to other sources for their farm workers if Carter's proposal is approved by Congress.

"We've got a lot of farmers around here that are aware of the impact it is going to have on them," Stenger says. "They don't like it very well. They think they are going to be left high and dry without any labor."

Once aliens obtain legal status in this country, they will be subject to the U.S. economy and will be forced to seek higher paying work in order to provide for their families, according to Rhodes. They will no longer wish to do low-paying farm labor.

"As long as their families are in the foreign countries, the low paying jobs are better than they can find there," Rhodes says.

Glenns Ferry chamber requests coal-fired plant site east of town

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

GLENNS FERRY — The Glenns Ferry Chamber of Commerce wants the Idaho Power Company to build its proposed coal-fired generating plant east of town.

The chamber vote by the six members attending a recent meeting contrasts sharply with strong opposition voiced by the town's mayor, Dayle Messerly, against both the Pioneer plant proposed several years ago at Orchard in Ada County, and the current application of Idaho Power to construct a plant at any of three locations.

These include sites near American Falls, Bliss and Dietrich.

The Glenns Ferry City Council two years ago went on record opposing the plant, according to Ed Bostic, city clerk. The council membership is the same now as it was two years ago.

Dolph Hitesman, Glenns Ferry chamber President, said private land is available between old Highway 30 and the Union Pacific railroad tracks about two and a half miles northeast of Glenns Ferry, where the highway curves around the clay banks.

"I get the feeling the plant is going to be built somewhere," Hitesman, who is local postmaster, said Wednesday. "As businessmen of the town, we feel that it should be built close enough so we'll get some of the benefit."

He said the chamber held two meetings to discuss the issue and the vote represents the "business interests" in Glenns Ferry.

Hitesman plans to present the idea to officials at the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (IPUC) for consideration in their choice of location if the application for the proposed 500 megawatt plant is approved by the agency.

Some 300 acres are for sale at the site, Hitesman said, with more private land nearby also available.

"The site is right along the river and although the land would be expensive, the availability of water would outweigh the cost of the land," Hitesman said.

The Mountain Home Chamber of Commerce earlier this summer endorsed the location of the proposed plant in Elmore county.

Smoky pall drifts from Sierras fire

TWIN FALLS — The smoky pall that drifted over southern Idaho Thursday afternoon and still hangs there today is not the sage-scented product of the Idaho desert going up in flames.

The smoke is from a 700-acre fire burning in the Toiyabe National Forest west of Bridgeport, Calif., on the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada mountains.

The smoke from the fire moved eastward across northern Nevada and into Idaho, creating its own weather front as it moved, picking up moisture and producing lightning.

Meanwhile, by Thursday morning, all of the Sawtooth National Forest's organized fire crews, about 80 men, had been dispatched to fight the blaze, forest service officials said, plus a helicopter and a B-26 for delivering fire-retardant.

By Thursday morning the blaze had burned 700 acres and was not yet under control. Thursday afternoon Sawtooth forest officials received a request from the fire area for additional men to fight the blaze.

City ordinance may profit developers

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Developers may ultimately have more freedom under a proposed new city zoning ordinance than under present guidelines.

Three years in the making, the new ordinance will be unveiled to the public next week.

The proposed ordinance is more than four times the length of the current ordinance, but, according to city officials, much of that bulk is accounted for by more clearly defined rules and standards and doesn't represent changes in rules.

According to City Planning and Zoning Commission chairman Jim Smallwood, the revised zone designation map, which is the heart of the new ordinance, represents little change in boundaries of the present zoning districts.

"The new map is practically a direct overlay of the present zoning districts," Smallwood said.

The new ordinance does make substantial changes in some districts, however.

A public information meeting, at which the new ordinance will be explained, will be held at the City Hall next Tuesday, Aug. 9, at 7:30 p.m. Copies of the proposed ordinance will thereafter be available for public viewing, and a public hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Aug. 30.

The proposed ordinance will then go to the city council for approval.

In a special chapter, three "design review" districts are established in which all building changes, improvements and construction will be carefully monitored for conformity with either natural surroundings or existing development in the districts.

Tagged "D" districts, the design review areas will require developers or those modifying buildings to obtain special design review applications which will spell out in detail the physical properties of the structures being changed or added, including landscaping specifications meeting special standards.

The three areas designated as D districts are:

—Rock Creek Canyon: Landscaping in the canyon itself must "enhance the natural beauty" and give consideration to wildlife habitat. Filling in the canyon will be prohibited. No building will be allowed closer than 100 feet to the canyon rim, and parking lots will be no closer than 50 feet to the rim.

—Shoshone Street: An area 200 feet back from either side of Shoshone Street between North Five Points and Fourth Avenue North and East will require review for compatibility with the downtown mall.

—College of Southern Idaho: An area 200 feet from any street adjacent to CSI, or if there is no street an area 280 feet from the edge of CSI property, will require review for compatibility with the college. "Direct access from residences onto Falls Avenue shall be discouraged," the proposed ordinance reads.

Despite review restrictions, the proposed ordinance may give developers more freedom through the employment of special "zoning subdistricts" which can be employed with city permission in regular zones even if the regular zoning might not recognize the type of use permitted in the special subdistricts.

The subdistricts will include planned unit developments (PUDs), mobile home parks, and mobile home subdivisions.

According to the proposed ordinance, "each zoning district within a development may be overlayed by one or more zoning subdistricts."

The zoning subdistricts will give developers a chance to establish mobile home uses and unit-type developments in zones where the structures might not otherwise be allowed.

New law may aid those on jury duty

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

JEROME — A new state law may be a boon to citizens called up for jury duty but it means extra expense and bother to court clerks.

The law limits the time a prospective juror must be on call to 10 court days or 60 calendar days.

Previously, a prospective juror could spend as long as two years before being dropped from the jury duty list.

In Jerome County, the new law means 125-member jury panels must be drawn up six times a year instead of once or twice a year, Clerk Virginia Ricketts says.

"We're going to be working with jury lists almost constantly," Mrs. Ricketts says. "The prospective juror is only eligible two months now, but the cost of the taxpayer is going to be greater, too."

Twin Falls County Clerk Gary Whitwell agrees.

"It will cost the taxpayers extra, first in postage to notify the prospective jurors, then in time to select names six times a year," he says.

Before, it could take a person five more trials to serve out 10 days," he explains. "Now some probably won't have to serve at all, but we had to select them and notify them anyway."

Ex-jurors, on the other hand, say they welcome the new law.

"I think that's ideal," Irene Black, Hazelton, says about it. "I was on the list for a year and a half and it got to be a pain."

"It seemed everytime you turned around you got a call to jury duty," she says. "It affected your plans a lot."

Carl Stephens, Jerome, says most people don't mind serving on a jury because "it's our duty." But he explains, "You feel like you're just being used for too long a time."

Stephens, Jerome County's treasurer, says he has been on the jury list for more than a year.

McClure, Garn propose river bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican Sens. James McClure of Idaho and Jake Garn of Utah are cosponsoring legislation to exempt commercial river runners from two federal regulations the lawmakers call "undesirable."

The two senators said Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., has introduced an identical bill in the House to exempt the whitewater rafting industry from regulation under the Small Vessels Passenger Inspection and Certification Act of 1956 and the Jones Act.

Garn said, "Both the 1956 act and the Jones Act were designed to regulate coastwide shipping, and to require that certain safety standards be met by commercial passenger vessels. They were never intended to apply to inland, recreational waters."

McClure added, "Extending those regulations to recreational boating on inland waters would actually work against public safety in some instances, and possibly kill the river guide business."

The Idaho Republican said, if passed, SB 1986 would prevent the U.S. Coast Guard from applying provisions of the two acts to rafters on inland recreation rivers.

The Jones Act prohibits the use of foreign made vessels between United States ports. "It seems to me inconceivable that provisions of this law designed to regulate shipping between major ports of the United States—whatever the justification—could be used to prevent river raft running between say Craig, Colo., and Cisco, Utah, because the raft is made in Taiwan or England," Garn said.

McClure pointed out that only a small number of rubber rafts are now manufactured in the United States, and most are considered inferior in quality and safety features to many foreign-made rafts.

"It is clear to me that regulation by the Coast Guard is highly undesirable," Garn said. "River runners are already regulated by the states in which they operate and by federal agencies where the rivers run through federal lands. The Coast Guard has no expertise in this area. It has no need to step into the river trade."

The two western senators said, "The people of this nation have no desire to see federal bureaucracies expand their jurisdictions without congressional authorization."

"This bill gives us an ideal opportunity to remind the Coast Guard of the limits of its authority. Its passage will have no effect on the safety of river traffic, only on the regulatory burden on the runners."

McClure added that "independent river runners have an impressive safety record. I don't think the Coast Guard has a proper role to play in this case."

Garn said, "The primary reason the Coast Guard has taken so long in getting around to river runners is that it knows full well that it is—so to speak—in over its head."

Leadership urged by governor

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans said Thursday it is "imperative" the state assume a leadership role in the future use of public land and he requested the Idaho Rangeland Committee to make recommendations toward such a goal.

The governor said it is important that recognition be made that the citizens of Idaho are able to set the direction for their future. Those who are closest to the land are best able to understand its potential and critical choices ahead.

"The time now dictates that the citizens of Idaho assume the responsibility for determining the future of our land," Evans said. "The choices will be critical and difficult, but we must make them if we are to preserve our resources, economy and lifestyle.

"Because the membership of the Idaho Rangeland Committee is representative of the major land policy interests in Idaho, I am requesting that the committee prepare recommendations to the administration which can be used to formulate goals for Idaho's future range management."

Adventists study 'witnessing'

EDEN—During the sabbath school, the Eden Seventh Day Adventist Church members will study "Called Out—to Go In."

The lesson is based on John 17:16-18 and deals with Christian witnessing.

The 11 a.m. worship hour speaker will be Jay Throckmorton of Rupert.

The Eden church members invite the public to view the "Faith for Today" telecast at 10 a.m. Sunday on KMVT. The title of the telecast this week is "Prescription for Stress."

The program originates in Thousand Oaks, Calif., and is directed by W.A. Fagel, according to Donald L. Robinson, spokesman for the Eden church.

Missionary director visits TF

TWIN FALLS—Rev. Harry Scism, foreign missions director of the United Pentecostal Church International, will be in Twin Falls Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the First United Pentecostal Church, 262 fifth Ave. E.

Rev. Scism was a missionary to India for over 22 years and regional supervisor for all of Asia for several years. His father was a pastor in Twin Falls over 30 years ago.

There will be special music by the "Singing Sewells." Also on Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. will be a night of singing with the Sewells.

Pastor Haskell D. Yadon invites the public to these special services.

Lesson-sermon title revealed

TWIN FALLS—The title of the lesson-sermon Sunday at the Christian Science Church will be "Spirit."

Sunday school begins at 9:45 a.m. and church services are at 11 a.m. Sunday and 8 p.m. Wednesday at the church, 160 Ninth Ave. E.

The Reading Room, 352 Main Ave. S., is open from noon to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Presbyterian services at 10 a.m.

TWIN FALLS—The United Presbyterian Church continues its worship at 10 a.m. Sundays throughout the summer.

This Sunday, Rev. Robert Van Nest will speak on the subject, "The Man Who Never Let God Down."

Mrs. Jean Pippitt will present the special music as she sings "The Bird Song." The church will celebrate the Sacrament of Infant Baptism and childcare is provided for young children.

All are welcome and invited to attend, says Van Nest.

Church services set in city park

TWIN FALLS—The First Church of Religious Science will hold its Sunday service at the Twin Falls City Park on Shoshone Street at 10 a.m.

Rev. Doreen J. Williams, minister of the church, has chosen "The Path to Peace" as her topic for Sunday.

She says there will be a picnic after the service and everyone is invited to attend the services and picnic.

Shooks appear in Buhl

THE Singing Shook Family will appear at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Magic Valley Baptist Church in Buhl. The Shooks play the piano, organ, electric bass guitar and harmonica. They will play old and new favorite hymns and spirituals and many songs they have composed. They have recorded 12 albums, the latest one being entitled "Lonely Voices," dedicated to American Indians. Everyone is welcome to the Buhl services.

Traditional Catholics feel rejected

© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — Before the last decade of church renewal, a rebellion from the Roman Catholic right seemed quite improbable. Doctrine was firmly rooted in the early church fathers, theology revolved around Augustine and Aquinas and the main ecclesiastical features had been fixed by the 16th century Counter-Reformation. Trouble, when it came, was usually made by the left.

But the Second Vatican Council (1962-1965) seemed to abandon much of the prevailing substructure, and as its reformist implications have been realized, the protests from traditionalists have grown louder.

French Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, the tireless opponent of the Vatican II drift, has shown how far discontent with the modern church can lead. By ordaining 14 priests at his own seminary in Econe, Switzerland, the archbishop again defied the warning of Pope Paul VI that the rite could provoke excommunication and moved one step closer to actual schism.

If such a formal break does take place — and some believe that implicitly it already has — the rupture is not likely to attract large numbers of Catholics to the archbishop's side. As the confrontation between the archbishop and the Pope has flared in the last year, it has placed the traditionalist forces in an awkward position. While they are unhappy with the results of the Council, they also believe in church order and feel ardently loyal to the Pope. One ultraconservative priest explained that while he did not agree with the present Pope's views, "my feeling of fidelity is similar to my saying, 'my father, drunk or sober.'"

Traditionalists are now beginning to feel pangs of rejection once reserved almost exclusively for those whose free thinking challenged church dogma or rule. The Inquisition was once an instrument to root out radical reformers, and a cleric could be dismissed for holding "false" beliefs. But now some traditionalists assert that the pendulum has swung so far in the other direction that "liberal" thinkers such as Swiss theologian Hans Kung escape with impunity, while Lefebvre is suspended merely for insisting on using the 16th-century Tridentine mass.

From the traditionalist standpoint, the Tridentine mass is a symbol of disciplined, adhesive, mystical church that was severely compromised by Vatican II. It is the centerpiece in a model of church life that spurns ecumenism and fears the increasing democratization of ecclesiastical decision-making. The vernacular mass, the growing role of the laity and the rising debate over the church's sexual ethics are seen as signs of decadence and profanation of Catholic heritage.

While such indictments may not attract huge throngs to traditional movements, they do ring true to Catholics who remain dissatisfied with the post-Vatican II church. Most of them stay somewhat uncomfortably in the church; others stop going. Meanwhile, even many church officials who remain unsympathetic to traditionlist causes believe the dissent was largely caused by the failure of the church to introduce major changes with sufficient preparation and flexibility.

Lefebvre's is a special base because, unlike other traditionalists, the 71-year-old prelate has the power to ordain. He is building a body of priests who could carry on without him. He could ordain another bishop, and speculation has already arisen over any plans he may have for choosing a successor.

Methodist Church scene of concert

TWIN FALLS — The Continental Singers and orchestra, Thousand Oaks, Calif., will present a concert of contemporary Christian music at 7 p.m. Aug. 10 in the First United Methodist Church.

BRAD HOLMES
...director

Brad Holmes, director, has been with the group the past four years. He served as assistant director during the 1974 and 1975 tours. Last year he directed the musicians in a tour which circled the United States and Canada.

He is attending the university of New Mexico, majoring in music education, and directing the music for a large church in Albuquerque.

Considered an excellent vocalist, oboe and saxophone player, Holmes has achieved state honors in his native New Mexico as a singer. In 1975 he formed an ensemble which ministered during the Billy Graham New Mexico Crusade.

The Continental Singers, a presentation of Continental Ministries of Thousands Oaks, presentation of Continental gospel songs, hymn and anthem arrangements, spirituals and praise songs.

During their 75-day tour the Continental Singers will perform daily, traveling from coast to coast across the United States. They also will spend three weeks in northern Europe, including Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland.

Lutheran operated college to assume four-year status

PORTLAND — Concordia College, located in Northeast Portland, has received authorization to move from a junior college to four-year status.

Permission was granted July 20 at the biennial convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, held in Dallas, Tex. The convention resolution calls for the addition of a junior class in September of 1978 and a senior class in 1979.

Concordia is one of 15 colleges and seminaries operated by this Lutheran Synod. The heaviest curriculum emphasis at the college is in the area of the training of church professionals.

The college projects a four-year enrollment of between 500 and 600 students by 1985.

Four-year terminal programs will be offered in the following areas: elementary education, elementary education with an emphasis in mental retardation, directors of Christian education, business administration and social work.

The college will continue to offer a four-year nursing program in cooperation with the University of Portland, and two-year terminal programs in secretarial science, law enforcement, and various additional areas, in cooperation with Portland Community College.

The permission to move to four-year status coincides with the removal of the high school department from the Northeast Portland campus. Beginning with September of 1977, the high school will move to a newly acquired facility located at SE 162nd and Division.

Concordia's plans for the future include construction of expanded library and dining facilities within several years. A capital fund campaign to provide $2 million to partially cover the cost of these buildings is presently underway.

Concordia College has been part of the Portland scene since 1905. It has been located at its present site since 1907. The school opened as an academy for boys preparing for the Lutheran ministry.

Christian Academy's new leader arrives

ROBERT BERRY
...principal

TWIN FALLS — Robert F. Berry is the new principal of the Twin Falls Christian Academy.

The school is affiliated with the Grace Baptist Church.

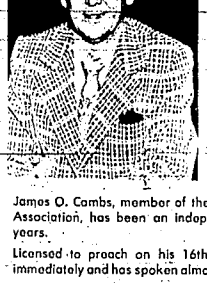

Berry, who became principal July 1, graduated with a bachelor's degree in economics from Western Washington State College, Bellingham, Wash., and worked in sales and business administration for several firms. In addition, he has completed graduate work at Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C., in education administration and supervision.

Berry said enrollment at the academy is expected to pass 100 pupils this fall. The academy opened in the fall of 1975 with 19 pupils enrolled. Berry said the academy follows a traditional approach to learning with emphasis on discipline and academic excellence, primarily in the areas of reading, arithmetic and English, with patriotism also stressed.

Conference

THE Bible Baptist Church, 136 East Second, Jerome, will hold a prophecy conference Sunday through Wednesday. The Sunday service will be at 10 a.m. and the weekday services will be at 8 each evening. James O. Combs, Baptist Evangelistic Missionary Association board member and an independent Baptist pastor for 25 years, will speak at the meetings.

PROPHECY CONFERENCE AUGUST 7 - 10

DR. J. O. COMBS

James O. Combs, member of the Board of Baptist Evangelistic Missionary Association, has been an independent Baptist pastor for more than 25 years.

Licensed to preach on his 16th birthday, Jim Combs began preaching immediately and has spoken almost every Sunday since 1943.

He is presently the President of Revelation Ministries, a California based organization, presenting prophetic conferences across America. Dr. Combs uses a multi-media approach, utilizing 3 screens, 7 projectors, sound, and more than 1600 photographs to illustrate graphically the entire book of Revelation. This unusual and colorful presentation backs up Dr. Combs' preaching in illustrated messages. Dr. Combs is conducting prophetic Bible conferences, prophecy seminars, and evangelistic services as a full time ministry.

Dr. Combs is a graduate of the Baptist Bible College of Springfield, Mo., the Bible Baptist Seminary of Fort Worth (Arlington), Calvary Bible College in Kansas City, with additional study at California Baptist Theological Seminary and Jackson College. Dr. Combs holds earned Bachelor's and Master's Degrees as well as Honorary Doctorates.

Dr. Combs' presentation will include the following timely messages: "Signs of The Times", "The Rapture Is Real", "The Coming World Dictator", and other informative prophetic themes.

Key church roles played by laity

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

Ask any pastor, church bureaucrat or leader about the role of the laity and the answer is certain to be that, of course, the lay men and women are the key to the whole institutional religious structure.

Increasingly, however, some people are beginning to think there is a wider gulf between the rhetoric of an important role for the laity in church structures and the reality of a layperson's actual standing.

Indeed, both Roman Catholic and Protestant theologians are beginning to talk about a "theology of the laity" that recognizes the gap between religious professionals and non-professionals and attempts to address the question of where the average person in the pew fits in the scheme of religious structures.

Synod of the United Church of Christ, Dr. Barbara Brown Zikmund, assistant professor of church history at Chicago Theological Seminary, attempted to spell out some of the trends and counter-trends that have resulted in a mind of two-level Christianity — radically separating the role of the clergy and laity, often to the detriment of the laity.

She notes that original meaning of the word "laos," from which laity derives, was the people, the whole people of God. When Christianity lost its underground, outcast status and became officially recognized, power and authority became increasingly concentrated in the hands of the clergy.

"In time," she said, "medieval church life reduced ordinary lay folk to second-class status in the church."

Dr. Zikmund said that while the Protestant Reformation "sought to reclaim the ancient power of the laity," by emphasizing that all Christians respond to a "calling" from God, in practice most churches do not really practice that understanding of vocation.

"National denominational bureaucracies have increased extensively in the last century, and through them the clergy have greater and greater influence over the laity," she said.

At the same time, she said it would be difficult to return to the Reformation understanding of the laity's job — his or her work outside of the church — as a response to God's calling.

where most people work as laborers or employer, "it is increasingly difficult to convince people that their occupation should be their primary means for serving God. Most of us simply do not believe that all jobs are equally worthy."

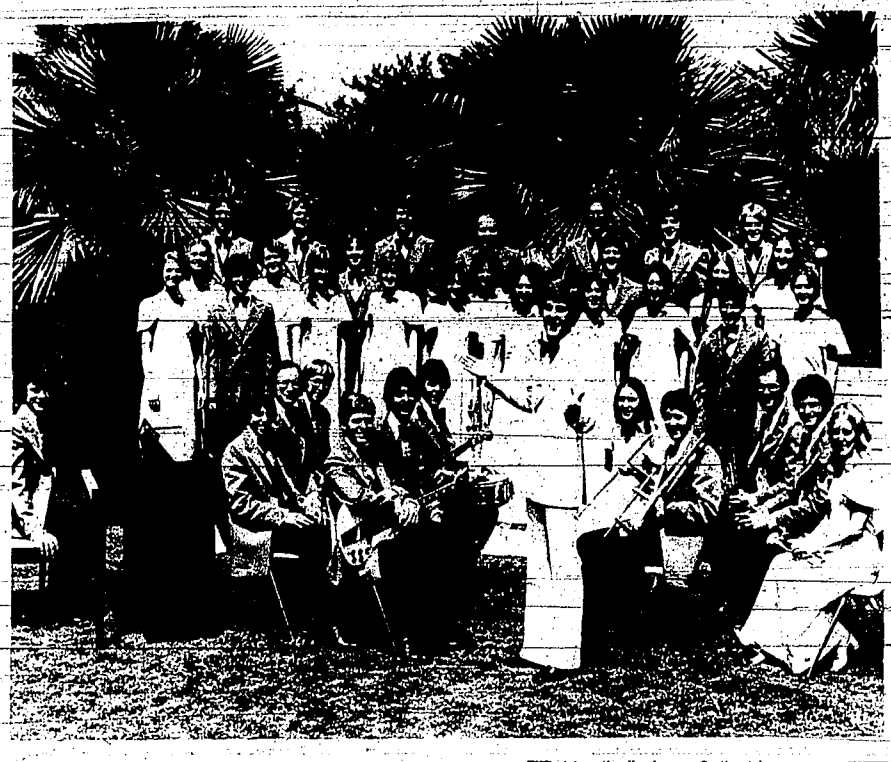

She made four suggestions as first steps in bridging the gap:

—"We need to stop making people feel guilty if they are not finding meaning in their work," recognizing that what a person does to earn a living might be different from what the person wants to do.

—"We need to redefine the concept of 'calling' so that we stop equating one's calling with occupation, job or work" and expand it to the whole of a person's lifestyle or existence.

—There is a need to expand the notion of calling beyond its association with sacred or religious things. "There is an insidious double standard which speaks of clergy having a call to the ministry and other people getting a job," she said.

—The church needs to find new ways, particularly liturgical ways "to help all people . . . mark and celebrate our calling as God's people." She noted in particular the Christian history of farm festivals and harvest celebrations the joy of living and working in God's world."

Concert scheduled

THE internationally known Continental Singers and Orchestra will present a concert of contemporary Christian music at 7 p.m. Aug 10 at the First United Methodist Church, Fourth and Shoshone, Twin Falls. The group has performed on local and national television and made 11 record albums. No admission will be charged for the concert but a love offering will be taken.

Elder sets TF visit

ELDER James M. Paramore, a member of the First Quorum of the Seventy of the LDS Church, will speak at the Twin Falls West Stake Quarterly Conference Saturday and Sunday, at 600 Harrison St., Twin Falls. There will be a Saturday evening session at 7:30 for all adult members in the stake. Following that meeting there is a dance for youth and adults. The Dale Plott Orchestra will provide the music. The public is invited to attend either of two Sunday conference sessions. College Branch, Twin Falls 2, 4, 6, and 10 all meet at 9 a.m. Twin Falls 8, Filer, Hollister and the two Buhl wards meet at 12. Junior Sunday School will be held for those wards during the corresponding hours.

Plains residents termed greedy

NEW YORK — Rev. Bruce Edwards, former pastor of the Plains Baptist Church, describes Jimmy Carter as "a man who doesn't feel welcome in his hometown, in the church he was a member of for so long and to which he will someday want to return," in an exclusive interview published in July McCall's.

Rev. Edwards, who, because of his opposition to the church resolution excluding Negroes and civil-rights agitators, was forced to resign his pastorship in February, and will become the new pastor of the Makakilo Baptist Church in Honolulu. He recounted the story of the first Plains Baptist Church meeting, called to discuss the membership of Rev. King, a black, when Rosalynn and Jimmy Carter were present.

Carter, he relates, was lowkeyed but tried to bring some humor to the situation by saying, "You know my brother Billy never comes to church. But if you pass a resolution saying that no one who sells beer can enter this church — he'll come."

The bitterness which has grown in Plains as a result of the church struggle and the instant publicity of the presidency has not been easy for Jimmy Carter to accept, Edwards revealed: "He takes it very personally, although he knows it is not really a personal matter and that it can't be helped. It's not him. It's not the tourists, really. It's the greed and selfishness that come when people fight over business and are in the glare of publicity.

"That 'Peanut' train which is clanging bell that shatters the quiet of the town as it takes sightseers about is just a symbol of the lost peace of Plains. There's no reason why people here shouldn't be making money, but when they start cutting one another's throats about it, it's too bad."

Rev. Edwards himself is displeased with the turn of events in Plains.

Losing his ministry was one thing, but he is really rankled, he says, by the behavior of the church's deacons: "I felt that they stood up and lied."

On the day that he was forced to resign, Edwards recalled, "I knew something was afoot immediately after the benediction. There were people streaming across the lawn into the church — people who hadn't even attended the church for years."

A leader of the group was Al Williams, owner of the other large peanut warehouse in Plains, who, according to Edwards, has been "competitive with Jimmy Carter most of his life."

Communion by hand granted by Vatican

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI has granted a request by U.S. Roman Catholic bishops that communion recipients be allowed to receive the wafers in their hands instead of directly in their mouths, Vatican sources said today.

The Vatican sources said the pontiff granted the request to make communion by hand an option for those receiving the sacrament because two-thirds of the U.S. bishops at a recent conference voted in favor of the change.

In the past, American priests have always put the wafer in the mouths of those receiving communion. They may still do so but now there will be a choice.

The sources said the alternate method was available to all countries if enough bishops requested it.

Smoky skies, little change ahead

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley-Rupert area:

Partly cloudy with no important change in temperatures through Saturday. Low temperatures tonight will be 55 to 60. Highs Saturday will range from 85 to 90. Probability of precipitation is 10 per cent or less tonight and Saturday.

Hailey, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley:

Scattered thunderstorms this evening, then partly cloudy tonight and Saturday. No important change in temperatures. Low tonight will be in the mid-40's, and highs will be in the mid-80's. Probability of precipitation will be 30 per cent this evening, and 10 per cent or less tonight and Saturday.

Synopsis:

The low altitude push of cold air from western Canada is losing its momentum and upper winds are returning to a southwesterly direction.

This means an end to the cooling trend and an increase in moisture. However, any resulting thunder storm activity should be spotty and confined mostly to the mountains as is usual in August.

The red sun this morning was caused by high altitude smoke which is being transported from the California forest fires at jet stream levels. This smoke will likely be with us for at least two more days.

The extended outlook for Sunday through Tuesday is generally dry weather and near normal temperatures, with highs around 90 and lows 50 to 55.

Gem wheat rates to coast reduced

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho wheat growers will be paying less to ship their product by rail to the coast this fall, Robert L. Henry, Boise, transportation consultant to the Idaho Wheat Commission, announced today.

Henry said railroad freight rates on wheat shipped from southwest Idaho points to Puget Sound grain export terminals have been reduced by nearly 16½ per cent.

The reduction, announced recently by Union Pacific Railroad, places rates to the Seattle area terminals at the same level as charged to Portland elevators and extends to shipping points as far east as Shoshone, he said.

Henry said North Idaho wheat growers who are able to ship from elevators located on Union Pacific, Camas Prairie or Spokane International railroads, will find shipping costs reduced by some nine per cent to Columbia River or Puget Sound terminals, effective Nov. 1.

Other North Idaho carriers are not scheduled to participate in the rate reduction, he said.

Henry said the North Idaho reduction has been made on a trial basis by Union Pacific. "Unless increased rail haul is achieved, the rates will expire and return to at least the present level on July 31, 1978," he added.

Increased loss of grain haul to competing barges and trucks is the basic reason for the railroad action, the transportation expert said.

"It is an attempt to recapture lost traffic," Henry said. "The carriers tried to meet, not cut, the price offerings of other carriers."

Henry said the rate adjustment for southern growers "should open up nearly 50 per cent more market to southwest and southcentral Idaho wheat growers."

He said grain has been a more important crop in the irrigated valleys of southwest and southcentral Idaho.

"Anything which eases our entrance into any market is important, especially when wheat is as difficult to sell as it has been in recent months," Henry said.

Despite grumbling, USSR harvest good

MOSCOW (UPI)—The official Soviet press is grumbling about bad weather and poor harvest preparations in some areas but Western observers believe prospects are still good for a record 1977 grain crop in the Soviet Union.

Western experts said they believe the forecast for a harvest of up to 225 million tons continues to hold good.

"In terms of normal harvest progress they are doing very, very well with over one-third of the crop cut," one Western agriculture specialist said. "They are way ahead of their best years of 1973 and 1976 at this stage of the harvest."

By August 1, Soviet workers had harvested grain crops on 44.5 million hectares of land (about 110 million acres), compared with only 25 million hectares at the same time last year and 36 million hectares in 1973.

The official government daily Izvestia complained Wednesday that heavy rains and wet fields were hampering grain harvesting in Byelorussia and the Baltic republics — but the experts noted that these areas account for only 3 to 4 per cent of the total harvest.

They said that even though grain may have been knocked down by rain in those areas the Soviets would likely be able to cut it — and if it cannot be dried for storage it can be used as livestock feed.

For the second time in recent weeks the Soviet Communist party daily Pravda today published an agricultural review complaining sharply about grain combines and transport vehicles being idled in some regions for lack of spare parts and repairs.

"They are sounding a little more shrill this year on the subject of poor preparations for the harvest — but this could well be because they are really pushing for that record grain harvest to celebrate the 60th anniversary of the Russian revolution this fall," one expert said.

"The complaints seem most shrill about regions which don't really matter all that much."

'Humane treatment' of horses problem

SALMON, Idaho (UPI) — The dean of veterinary medicine at the University of Idaho says one of the big problems in the management of wild horses is how to handle them in a manner that "humane groups consider being humane."

Dr. Floyd Franks, who served as a member of the National Wild Horse and Burro Advisory Committee when it was in existence, made the comment after meeting with Bureau of Land Management officials this week in Salmon.

"The regulations they have for implementation of the act say in effect they should prevent unnecessary stress," he said. "Some of the things that have happened in corrals and during corralling—and handling of horses have been viewed as inhumane."

Franks said he was in Salmon primarily to discuss some research methods on immobilizing horses so they are not unduly stressed resulting in negative public reaction.

He also said he was looking at what would be the optimum population from the point of view of minimizing the threat of disease.

"If you let horse populations build up too high you have disease problems," he said.

"The ideal situation would be to arrive at a population below that point."

Franks suggested that perhaps it would be better to have wild management decisions made by a committe looking at the total picture, rather than just wild horses.

Soviets visit Gem farms

MOSCOW — Five young agricultural specialists from the Soviet Union are in Idaho to work and live on Gem State farms for three weeks.

They are scheduled to leave Idaho Aug. 23.

The Soviets are part of a larger group visiting America this summer in the Young Agriculture Specialists Exhange Program (YASEP) between the United States and the Soviet Union. The purpose of the exchange is to share agricultural technology and strengthen understanding between people of the two most powerful nations in the world. American delegates will visit the Soviet Union while the Soviets are in the United States.

YASEP is conducted in the United States by the National 4-H Council on behalf of the Cooperative Extension Service of the state land grant universities and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

International Harvester Co. of Chicago provides major funding for program. U.S. delegates' travel is financed by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the U.S. Department of State.

Soviet delegates and their host families in Magic Valley include:

— Huson M. Karimov, junior researcher for the Soviet Ministry of Agriculture, who will stay at the Francis McNall farm near Samuels, Aug. 3-12; and at the Jack Thomason ranch near Jerome, Aug. 12-22.

— Alexander V. Klotchkoff, a graduate student at the Byelorussian Agricultural Academy, who will visit the Ron Ballard farm near Kimberly, through Aug. 12, and the Tom Sirosche Ranches near Sterling, Aug. 12-22.

— Sergie N. Sakharov, a senior engineer at a research institute for dairy and grazing land, who will be a guest at the Jim Jessup farm near Grangeville, Aug. 3-12, and at the Richard George farm near Murtaugh, Aug. 12-22.

No beef conspiracy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Justice Department has released a report saying it could find no evidence to support an alleged conspiracy in price-fixing of beef.

The two-year study came following congressional hearings on the issue in 1975. Congress held the hearings in an effort to determine the reasons for the difference in price received by the producer and the retail price paid by the consumer.

Assistant Attorney General John Shenefield stated "there was no concrete evidence to invest substantial additional resources into further investigation."

The report, delivered to Sen. Cliff Hansen, R-Wyo., Wednesday, said if private lawsuits could present more tangible evidence, the investigation could be reopened.

LEGAL NOTICE

PUBLIC NOTICE OF INTENT TO ADOPT A STATE PLAN AND TO HOLD A HEARING

Notice is hereby given that the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, proposes to adopt a State Plan for Weatherization Assistance for Low Income Persons, pursuant to Part A, 42 U.S.C. 6861-6872 of Title IV of the Energy Conservation and Production Act, P.L. 94-385, 90 Stat. 1125 et seq.

The following subjects and issues are involved:

Number, location, and costs of housing to be weatherized; agencies to perform weatherization for low income persons with priority extended to the elderly and handicapped residents of Idaho.

Copies of the proposed State Plan may be obtained by writing to the State Economic Opportunity Office, Statehouse Mail, Boise, Idaho 83720.

Interested persons may present their views, data and comments in writing to this office on or before August 19, 1977.

A Public Hearing on the proposed State Plan will be held Aug. 19, 1977, at 1:30 p.m. in the Gold Room (Room 420) of the Statehouse in Boise, Idaho.

Dated this 2nd day of August, 1977.

Horse teams provide rides

THE "buses only" sign is ignored by these two teams of horses at Elkhorn. Every Monday and Wednesday the horses provide hay rides for visitors to the Elkhorn Valley. The teams leave from the Elkhorn Village center and travel to the Elkhorn Stables for a barbecue picnic for guests on the wagon.

Aging assembly proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A world assembly on aging was proposed in legislation introduced in the U.S. Senate Wednesday.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, called on the U.S. delegation to the United Nations to work with other nations to support such a conference in 1982.

Church said the world population of persons over 60 is expected to reach 585 million, an increase of 100 per cent, by the year 2000.

"I have suggested that 1982 be designated for the World Assembly on Aging because only one U.N. function can be conducted in any one year. Similar conferences will be held on children in 1979, women in 1980 and the disabled in 1981," Church said.

Spacecraft readied for decade-long voyage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Voyager spacecraft ready to scout Jupiter, Saturn and possibly Uranus and Neptune may see a variety of strange worlds including the salt beds of extinct seas and exotic landforms of ice and mud, the space agency said today.

The first of the twin television probes is scheduled for launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla., Aug. 20, and the second will depart Sept. 1. Both missions may last a decade or longer and give man his first close-up look at a dozen bodies in the solar system.

In announcing details of the two missions, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the four largest satellites of Jupiter will "provide a varying and fascinating microcosm of unique worlds."

The twin television cameras on the two Voyagers will get good looks at all five of Jupiter's inner satellites, the major satellites of Saturn and that planet's awesome rings.

Scientists say the pictures of the inner Jovian satellites alone should provide a wealth of information. Some are believed to be made up largely of rock, some of ice and some of water.

"Their surfaces probably range from lunarlike cratered plains, to salt-covered beds of extinct seas, to exotic landforms created out of ice and mud," NASA said.

Most satellites of Saturn apparently are composed primarily of ice. Titan, the largest moon in the solar system, has a strange, cold atmosphere as thick as Earth's.

Jupiter and Saturn seem to be immense balls of hydrogen and helium with no apparent solid surface. Each has its own internal energy sources, putting out more radiation than it receives from the sun.

Voyager 1 is scheduled to fly within 173,000 miles of Jupiter on March 5, 1979, and then swing on to scout Saturn, coming within 86,000 miles on Nov. 12, 1980. Voyager 2, which will be launched first on a slower course, will fly by Jupiter July 10, 1979, and pass Saturn Aug. 27, 1981.

If all goes well, Voyager 2 will be sent on to scout Uranus in 1985 and may continue on to survey Neptune.

Both spacecraft eventually will coast out of the solar system. On the remote chance that some space-faring civilization might someday encounter them, both probes carry copper phonograph records containing two hours of the sounds of Earth — greetings in 60 languages, samples of music and natural sounds such as the surf, wind, thunder and those of animals.

Repairs at sewage station authorized by city council

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council has authorized City Manager Jean Millar to enter into a contract to make repairs at the city's Rock Creek sewage pumping station.

The authorization came at the council's regular meeting Monday after Millar said a bid for repairs and additions at the pumping station was excessive.

The estimates for additional piping and pumping equipment had been about $50,000, Millar said, but the single bid received was more than $88,000.

Millar told the council he was confident the city could contract the pumping station work for less than the bid made by H-K Contractors, Idaho Falls.

The council also accepted Millar's recommendation that a responsibility exchange with the State Highway Department be denied.

Millar told the council that the Highway Department wanted the city to take over responsibility for upkeep on portions of Blue Lakes Boulevard, a state highway, in return for the state taking over responsibility for portions of Shoshone St.

Millar said the city had widened and upgraded Shoshone St., while the portion of Blue Lakes proposed for exchange still needed work. He said the council should deny the state request until the state had improved Blue Lakes "in the same fashion" the city had improved Shoshone.

In other action at its Monday meeting the council:

— Approved a waiver of building permit fees for an Art Cottage under construction at the College of Southern Idaho.

Council members expressed anger when told CSI had started construction without a building permit, but they cooled off when city engineer Gary Young said plans for the building were submitted and found to be satisfactory before construction started.

Millar told the council he didn't know if a building permit had been issued.

— Approved an Airport Day Aug. 25 to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Charles Lindbergh's crossing of the Atlantic. Airport manager Harry Merrick told the council Lindbergh made a tour of the country shortly after his successful flight, stopping at most airports.

Since Twin Falls had no runway in 1927, he said, Lindbergh dropped a scroll to commemorate his flight. Merrick said Twin Falls still has the scroll. A similar scroll will be dropped on a national re-creation of the Lindbergh this month, he added.

— Placed on first reading an ordinance to change to residential medium from residential low density a Falls Avenue land parcel. The parcel, located along Falls across from CSI and west of the Cascade Manor Apartments, has been proposed for multi-family housing units by Boise developer Bryce Peterson.

— Placed on first reading an ordinance to allow Elynor Young, wife of city engineer Gary Young, to make and sell ceramics from her home on Fillmore Street.

Because of her relationship to one of the city's chief employes, council members questioned Mrs. Young at length about parking, business hours and other details of her proposed business.

City councilwoman Mary McClusky spoke against a conditional use for commercial purposes in a neighborhood untouched by business encroachment. "We're just going to lose everything," she said.

Mrs. Young, who had collected petitions from neighbors in support of her endeavor, indicated her biggest concern had been to stay within the law, since her ceramics sales would probably not change the character of the neighborhood.

"I'd like to be able to make them and sell them to a friend without anybody getting angry with me," she said.

— Approved annexation of two land parcels along Washington Street North and approved an out-of-city sewer agreement for the Camera Center property on Addison Ave. E.

— Placed on first reading an ordinance adding the presidents of the men's and women's Twin Falls Golf Associations to the Golf Advisory Commission.

— Awarded an intermediate certificate to police officer Robert Hodge for professional training achievement.

Cause of sterilization studied

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The state is investigating a chemical plant in Lathrop, Calif., to see if it should be closed down because some of its employes are becoming sterile.

A spokesman for the Occidental Chemical Co., which owns the plant in San Joaquin County, said the plant's "agriculture chemical department has been shut down voluntarily" pending the state study and "employes there have been transferred to other departments."

Dr. Robert Johnson, medical adviser for the state Occupational Safety and Health Program, visited the plant Wednesday to determine whether a total shutdown was justified on medical grounds.

An investigation of 26 workers at the plant showed a "significant number" became sterile while working in a plant area where farm chemicals are produced.

"It was just recently that we started to notice that none of us fathered any children in the last few years," said one worker, who asked not to be identified.

One source close to the investigation reported that five of the first 15 persons tested had a sperm count of zero. A normal sperm count is 50 million.

Art Carter, the state chief of industrial safety, said no other significant medical abnormalities were found in the workers.

Some of the workers had undergone vasectomies, but tests on the others indicated sterility that may have been caused by chemicals.

Steffan refused Wednesday to blame the sterility firmly on that because the workers handled dozens of other chemicals, but he suggested that users of nemagon should consider substituting alternates when practical.
